Sheriff Barham's memory did not serve him very well when he was he had told the writer frankly that excessive fees had been collected, in which he shared, and had discussed Circuit Court records showing that land on which $15,390 in back taxes were owed had sold for $2853, of which $230 was sold to the taxes. The balance, back taxes were owed had been $2623, including $465 for the Sheriff, went to pay fees and costs.

As a witness the Sheriff often answered, "I don't remember." said he did not know how his fees were computed, that he had left such matters to a deputy in his office who was in charge of keeping the books.

The method of computing fees, as has been told in the Post-Dispatch, was to base them on the amount sue for rather than on the amount collected. Consequently the county, which State of-ficials have called "bankru,t," seldom received more than a small fraction of what was due it.

Edgar Moore, 25 years old, former convict, was shot and seriously wounded at 12:30 p. m. yesterday, by one of two policemen who were pursuing him in the neighborhood of Lucas and Garrison avenues, to arrest him for questioning about recent filling station burglaries.

Escaping from the policemen at the time, Moore was arrested at 4:50 p. m. in his room at 3854 Washington boulevard, and was aken to City Hospital. His condition was said last night to be

A police teletype order for Moore's arrest went out yesterday. Special Policemen Patrick Burke and Curtis Underwood of Laclede Avenue Station saw him in an automobile at Locust boulevard and Garrison avenue, and pursued him an alley, where he ran away from them after his machine had struck

Each of the policemen fired one shot at him, but Moore got away. It was found soon afterward that he had run to Delmar boulevard, outside St. Louis, was made last and had taken a taxicab west on Delmar to the 3800 block. A NEW STEINWAY GRAND PIANO FOR ONLY

SIZE-5' 1" to fit the modern room PRICE—to fit the modern budget QUALITY-Steinway throughout

It is with the greatest pleasure that Steinway & Sons announce the new model "S," a Steinway Grand piano at the low price of $885!

This superb new instrument is a true Steinway in every sense of the word. It is as perfectly constructed . . . of as fine materials . . . as the Steinway Concert Grands used in recital by Hofmann, Paderewski and Rachmaninoff. Craftsmen, many of whom have been with this company for ten, twenty, thirty years, apply their rich experience to its building.

A new piano . . . an old ideal

The need for a piano of Steinway quality, priced at less than one thousand dollars, is very generally acknowledged. Too many pianos, today, are made to sell, rather than to provide a lifetime of pleasure. Yet, in the face of insistent urging to bring out a new, smaller instrument, Steinway has chosen to proceed slowly . . . to wait until excellence could be assured.

In our sincere opinion, this is the finest plane obtainable at the price . . . its only superior a larger Steinway. Here, again, is the incomparable Steinway tone . . . the glorious singing voice which has made the Steinway the one, perfect instrument of concert hall, radio, and home. The action is sensitive beyond all previous ideas of sensitivity. For the new piano has the Steinway Accelerated Action ("the greatest improvement in pianos in the last thirty years") . . . as well as every other exclusive Steinway refinement.

Steinway Week - February 3 to 8, inclusive

You are cordially invited to our showrooms during "Steinway Week"— to see, hear, play this amazing new instrument. You will have opportunity to inspect the piano at leisure, and to ask questions of any nature.

While you are here, we shall be glad to explain the Steinway plan of payment. You may purchase the model "S" with only a small sum down — the balance distributed over a period mutually agreed upon. . . . And your new Steinway will be delivered at once - to remain, throughout your own and your children's lifetime, a glamourous, enriching possession,

Socialist Says All Act on "False Assumption of Durability of Profit System."

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.-Norman Thomas, Socialist leader, rapped and the Washburn-Crosby Co. leaders and Alfred E. Smith alike Court ordered $1,373,550 and in a radio speech tonight as perleaders and Alfred E. Smith alike 3942,911 paid them respectively. The sons more interested in the capital-ist profit system than "true demist profit system than "true demist." ocracy." Thomas surveyed the po-litical campaign field from Gov. Alfred M. Landon of Kansas to Gov. Eugene Talmadge of Georgia, and declared:

"Basically, beneath all the alarms and confusion, these worthy warriors, both happy and unhappy, are -an assumption which is danger-

They assume that prosperity is coming back again to

"Mr. Roosevelt and his followers assume that prosperity is coming back because of the New Deal. Al Smith and the rest of Mr. Roose velt's assorted critics assume that it is in spite of the New Deal and perhaps because of the Supreme Court. Mr. Hoover plaintively protests that the catastrophic depres-sion of January-February, 1933, -costs less than 1c a day—$3.50 a was due merely to the shudders of the body politic anticipating the economic horrors of the New Deal.

> "All of these leaders or wouldbe leaders out of our wilderness. however they may abuse one another, however loosely they may fling around the charge of Socialism or Communism—the two are not the same—still accept the basic institutions and loyalties of the present system. A true Socialist is colved to replace that system." Thomas said there were still "around 10,000,000 unemployed in the United States," and declared that President Roosevelt—despite Smith's assertion—had not adopted a Socialist program. "His slogan was not the Socialist cry: 'Workers of the world, workers with hand and brain, in town and country, unite," Thomas declared. "His cry was: 'Workers and small stockholders unite, clean up Wall Street.' That cry is at least as old as Andrew Jackson."

"The one outstanding act of the Administration that Socialists applaud," Thomas declared, "is, of course, the Tennessee Valley Authority. That of itself is not So No single measure of the sort can be Socialism by itself. But it is Socialist to the extent that it substitutes production for use for production for profit." Thomas to Alfred E. Smith. Thomas declared in direct statenent to Smith that the goal of Socialism was "true democracy."

"It is we who lead in the fight for liberty and justice which you in recent years have sadly ignored," he said. "It is we who seek to make freedom and democracy constitutional by advocating a workers' right amendment in the interests of farmers, workers and consumers, giving to Congress power to adopt all needful social and economic legislation, but leav-ing to the courts their present power to help protect civil and religious liberty. "Our present judicial power of legislation is an undemocratic as it is in the long run dangerous to peace. Remember the Dred Scott decision. Congress rather than the state must act because the issues are national. "The Constitution was made for man and not man for the Constitution. 'We Socialists seek now its orderly amendment. We seek now a policy which will make it a little harder for American business interests to involve us in war as a result of a mad chase after the profits of war."

Attorney, Suing for $150,000, Says He Wrote Client That It Was "Unethical."

Bert F. Fenn, an attorney, whose $150,000 damage suit against a subsidiary of the National Lead Co and members of the State Supreme Court Bar Committee in St. Louis disclosed his professional conduct was under investigation by the committee, acknowledged in a deposition yesterday that he had told a client "the Bar Association" and its Grievance Committee were "very unethical."

Under questioning by an attorney for the defendant National Pig-ments & Chemical Co., Fenn testified he had filled out statements and sent them to clients who, he had heard, were being urged by company investigators to make affidavits against him. At the end of one of these statements. Fenn acknowledged, he dictated the following paragraph:
"I am asking you to sign and swear to this paper because the Bar Association claims I advanced you money, paid your expenses, promised to take care of you and agreed to split my fee with you on any case you might bring to me, all of which the Bar Association knows, or should know, is a falsehood and downright lie. But the Bar Association is very unethical and members of the Grievance Committee are unethical and the National Lead Co., according to affidavits I have, claim to own the Grievance Committee of the Bar Association, and make claim through their agents they are going to disbar me for attempting to represent you and some other

Start of the Silicosis Suits. This communication was addressed to Gaston L. Eaton, a client at Farmington. In asking sworn statements from his clients, Fenn was seeking to prove his contention that he had not solicited personal injury claims from workmen who might have contracted silicosis, a lung disease resulting from inhalation of silica dust.

Fenn began to prosecute silicosis claims soon after the National Lead Co. closed its mines in St. Francois County in 1933 and about the same time a deluge of damage suits was directed against the National Lead and other mining companies by St. Louis lawyers repreworkmen. Subsequently Fenn filed 136 silicosis suits. In its 33 years of operations in St. Francois County, up to 1932, none of the company's employes brought suit against it on account of an occupational disease, it was shown.

In response to questions, Fenn of the suits or that ever in his 36 years as a lawyer he encouraged litigation. Clair S Cullenbine attorney for the pigments company, questioned Fenn on affidavits by fort to show solicitation of their claims. Fenn, however, replied that he had affidavits from the same men, protecting him against such The affidavits in the hands of the company, he asserted, vere acquired by purchase or in-

Vague About Early Life. Questioned about his educational qualifications and early life, Fenn testified he was graduated from a grammar school, but had no recolection in what town or city, nor had he any recollection of attending a high school. He was reared, he said, by an aunt in Illinois, but asserted he could not recall in what town his aunt resided at the time. He came to St. Louis in 1892 and was admitted to the bar in 1900. He has been cited by the Supreme Court, on an application by Attorney-General McKittrick to appear Feb. 17, and show cause why he should not be held in contempt of court for naming members of the Bar Committee as co-defendants in his suit against the lead company.

Commissioner Lawrence Mc-Daniel is going to Washington this week and the next hearing will be held at 11 a. m. Friday, when he

MITCHEL FIELD IS 'BOMBED' IN ARMY AIR MANEUVERS

One Wing of Detending Force "Strafing" Worcester (Mass.) Airport at the Time.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 1. - Mitchel Field theoretically was blown up by a squadron of army bombing planes today while the defending force was busy elsewhere.

Tacticians emphasized the defend-ers were not concerned with warlike problems at the moment and permitted the "invading" bombers to go through the motions of "laying their eggs" on the field without resistance.

The attacking force, six of the latest type bi-motored Martin bomb-ers, swept over the field at an altitude of 15,000 feet in the opening phase of the general headquarters air force winter maneuvers and then returned to their temporary base at Concord, N. H. While they were "bombing" the most vital army field in the Northeast, one wing of the defense force was "strafing" the airport at Worcester, Mass., on the theory that the bombers might like to stop off there on their way back, and the other wing was on the ground being serviced.

"All we attempted to do today," explained Lieutenant-Colonel Russell L. Maxwell, press liaison ofreasonable day's work to do."

Nagle, an engineer of the national park service, as superintendent of the project. Nagle ecently made a report to Secretary

Ickes on the proposal. The Mayor said to a Post-Dispatch reporter that he would confer with Comptroller Louis Nolte on steps to be taken to make the city's appropriation available to the Federal Government which is to administer the memorial development brough the national park service. He hoped it might be possible to advance the $2,250,000 at once out of funds on hand, the treasury to be eimbursed later with proceeds of

There is a possibility that offering the bonds for sale may be deayed by a pending suit in Federal District Court questioning the legality of the bond issue. City Coun-selor E. H. Wayman has asked for but not yet received an opinion on the legality of the bonds from Attorney Benjamin H. Charles, who frequently passes on the validity of bond issues for underwriting houses. Comptroller Nolte said to a Fost-Dispatch reporter that if Charles gives an opinion that the bonds may be legally sold he will sale. In the Board of Estimate and Apportionment Nolte voted against sale of the bonds, but was overruled by the other two members, the Mayor and President William L. Mason of the Board of Aldermen.

Voters approved a $7,500,000 city bond issue for the memorial at a special election last September, with the expectation that the Government would contribute $22,500,-000 toward a $30,000,000 development. Attorney-General Cummings ruled the President was not authorized to allocate more than could be expended before July 1, 1937. Sponsors of the project hope the $9,000,-000 now in sight, which includes the Federal allotment of $6,750,000

SNELL ASSAILS FISCAL POLICIES OF NEW DEAL

Measure Authorizes Sale of House Republican Leader Quotes Roosevelt's 1932 Speech on Spending.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.- Attack ing the fiscal policies of the adfrom sale of bonds, toward the cost of New York, House Republican of the proposed river front Jeffer- leader, asserted in a radio address tonight that the administration "is not only abhorent to the average citizen but is destructive to that hrift, energy and spirit that made

America what it is today. Snell said a nation which "is willarea, is to be made a national park its spending, extends its taxing to ing to make no sacrifices at all in and Secretary of the Interior Ickes the limits of the people's power to "Perhaps," he said, "my listeners recognize that warning as having been uttered before. . . . It was made by Candidate Roosevelt at Pittsburgh, Oct. 19, 1932. It is the surest self-indictment ever uttered by any man."

Declaring that "we have been under the thumb of a spendthrift," Snell said that at no time since March, 1933, has the national budget been balanced, but, to the contrary, deficits have mounted. "Already this year," he said, "with but little more than half of the fiscal year gone, the New Deal deficit is more than two billion dollars for the year and about 13 billions since 1933. The public debt when Mr. Roosevelt came into office was $20,934,728,350. That was the public debt Feb. 28, 1933. Under the loose fiscal policies of the New Deal that debt has grown until on Dec. 31, a month ago, it had reached the unprecedented figure . . of $30.557.324.062."

Snell criticised what he called the practice of keeping two budgets, one for regular governmental expenditures and another for emergency and relief outlays, as being for the "distinct and very definite purpose of fooling the people about expenditures." He contended that under both money was being wast-

"The fact of the matter is," he said, "that routine costs of government have mounted tremendously and routine costs are wholly aside emergency expenditures.

"The expenses for conducting ordinary government in the last year of " the Hoover administration amounted to $3,865,000,000, while the expenses in prospect for the fiscal year 1936-37 for the same purpose. and I again emphasize not for emergency purposes, show an increase of a little short of a billion dollars, or an increase of 23 per and the city appropriation of $2,cent under an administration that 250,000, will be sufficient to acquire. was pledged to reduce these same the site by condemnation or purexpenditures by 25 per cent.

MINERS VOTE CAMPAIGN GIFTS FOR ROOSEVELT

United Convention Indorses President for Re-election as 'Greatest Humanitarian of Our Time.'

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1: - The United Mine Workers' convention today formally indorsed President Roosevelt for re-election, also authorized a contribution, to the Democratic campaign fund, and directed the miners' Executive Council to chart the course for the union's fight for a "social justice" amendment to the United States Constitution. Officers said the union never before had indorsed anyone for political office.

How much of the union's reported $2,000,000 in its treasury as of Dec. 1 will go to the Roosevelt campaign fund is to be determined by the executive council. Local additional contributions. The convention cheered the adop-

MISSOURI EMERGENCY BANKING ACT EXPIRES AFTER 3 YEARS Ill State Banks That Remain Open

Restriction.

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 1.-For the first time in nearly three years all State banks in Missouri are operating without restrictions. The Emergency Banking Act, which permitted banks to limit withdrawals pending reorganization or liquidation, expired today after having been extended a year by the Legislature.

Following the 1933 banking holiday, 187 banks were placed on a re-stricted basis. Since that time, 70 have resumed normal business or have been consolidated or liquidated, paying depositors in full; 43 have reorganized paying 50 per cent or more of their deposits; three have paid approximately 40 per cent; 70 have been placed in liqui-dation, and only one, which has not received deposits since March, 1933. has yet to be disposed of by the State Finance Department.

The Farmers' Bank of Powers-ville, unable to reorganize within the time limit, was closed today. It was headed by Carl S. Allen and had total resources of $154,788. During the last week the State Bank of Waynesville and the El-lington Bank voluntarily liquidated, and the Bank of Clark closed.

> Reduction Since 1931. The Tax Commission issued a tabulation comparing 1935 valua-tions with those for 1931. It showed a reduction of $966,516,342, or 20.1 per cent. The bulk of this reduction was represented by a decrease of $679,382,166 in real estate assessments and a decrease of $204,173. 758 in personal property assess-average property tax rate in Missouri now was about $2 on the $100 assessed valuation. On that basis the $966,516,342 reduction in assess ments since 1931 would indicate a reduction of about $19,330,000 in property taxes. The actual saving would not be that great, however, as the average property tax rate in 1931 was estimated, at that time, by Tax Commission members, at $1.50 to $1.75 on the $100 valuatio Cut by Republicans.

Approximately half of the reduc-tion shown in the 1931-1935 comparison may be credited to the pres ent Democratic state administration and the remainder to the preceding Republican administration. The State Board of Equalization in 1932, solidly Republican, ordered a reduc tion of $467,468,523. The present Board of Equalization, solidly Democratic, which went into office in January, 1933, made assessment reduction aggregating $499,047,819 in 1933, 1934 and 1935.

GARMENT WORKERS' CONTRACT FOR TWO YEARS IS SIGNED

Provisions for Wages and Working Conditions Similar to Old Agreement.
A new contract between 1800

members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and the Associated Garment Industries epresenting 45 silk and woole garment manufacturers in Louis, was signed yesterday, effective for two years dating from last Nov. 15.

The contract generally contains the same provisions with reference to wages and working conditions as the old contract, which expired Aug. 31. The new agreement strengthens the powers of the board of arbitration of three disinterested citizens, as set up in the old contract, and establishes a code of procedure for the board. The pay basis for computing piece work rates, as formerly, was fixed at 521/2 cents to 63 cents an hour for operators and 80 cents for pressers. Minimum scale for straight-time workers ranged from $14 to $35. A maximum 35-hour week was fixed, with special regulations for overtime.

The agreement was signed by I D. Goldberg, vice-president of the employers' organization, and Meyer Perlstein and Ben Gilbert, representing the union.

Federal Judge Davis Names Congressman Requests Other Chase Morsey Trustee to Liquidate Business.

An order finding the Louis Obert Brewing Co., 2700 South Twelfth street, insolvent and ordering adjudication of its affairs in bankruptcy was issued yesterday by Federal Judge Davis, with the agreement of the company and all other parties concerned.

Court appointed Chase Morsey, a lawyer, as trustee to liquidate the business and directed that a hearing be held before Referee in Bankruptcy Hope next Friday. The order provided that costs of an unsuccessful effort at reorganization and attorneys' fees in the liquidation be assessed as first liens against the bankrupt estate.

Attorneys for the company were unable to obtain sufficient subscription of new capital by the stockholders to carry out reorganization under the amended bank-ruptcy law. A petition for such reorganization was filed by the corporation last March 21, at which time Judge Davis remarked, "A good many people will be disap-pointed if they believe a court has ome mystic method for saving a failing business."

Assets were listed in the petition as $$55,000 and debts as $190,000, but the company, unable to obtain credit, has not operated since August, 1934. Capitalization of the company consisted of 33,000 shares of preferred stock at $3 a share and 100,000 shares of no-par-value on stock. The brewery, which was closed in 1927 after making beverage for several years, was re-habilitated for $203,000 in 1933. Holders of $122,908 in defaulted notes secured by a first deed of trust opposed reorganization and ought foreclosure.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH COCHRAN URGES BONUS

Veterans to Delay Filing Their Applications.

An appeal to World War veterans who do not intend to cash their bonus bonds immediately after receiving them, to delay making application until jobless veterans have had opportunity to do so, was last night by Edward J. made Roche at the suggestion of Congressman Cochran.

Roche, labor supervisor for the WPA and formerly chairman of the Commanders' Conference of the American Legion, received a telegram from Cochran, which pointed out that those veterans who are not in need of money immediately could lose nothing by delaying their applications.

Applications will be considered in the order received, Cochran said, and for that reason unemployed veterans should have the first opportunity to file.

Those who intend to hold the onus bonds. Roche said, could delay their applications for several months or years without prejudicing their rights. The bonds will begin to draw interest next June 15, whether or not they have been actually issued.

A considerable number of those who filed their applications last week, Roche said, had never borrowed on their adjusted compensation certificates and for that reason might be assumed to have no pressing need for the bonus money. He said he intended to ask commanders of Legion posts and other service organizations to request that their members give the unemployed veterans the first opportunity. While thousands of application blanks had been issued, Roche said, comparatively few had been completed with the necessary official certificate of identity. He thought that many veterans were CHICAGO, Feb. 1.—Announced waiting for the next meeting of their posts to do that, as elected officers of variance and continues of their posts to do that, as elected officers of variance and continues of the c officers of veterans' organizations

The office of the Veterans' Administration Facility in the new Federal Building, Twelfth boulevard and Market street, and the bonus application station established by the Disabled American Veterans at 3737 West Pine boulevard will be open today to receive

PROBATE JUDGE ARNOLD'S 1935 COMPENSATION $10,318

He Files Annual Report Showing Office Collected $400,000 in Inheritance Taxes. The first annual report of Glendy

B. Arnold as Judge of the Probate Court was filed yesterday with Circuit Clerk H. Sam Priest, in whose office the law specifies such reports shall be made. The report relates to business transacted from Jan. 1, 1935, when Judge Arnold took office, to Dec. 31.

Exclusive of inheritance taxes the fees collected total $84,998, from which $64,025 was expended for salaries of clerks. The Probate Court is entitled to retain 21/2 per cent of commissions for the collection of State inheritance taxes, which commissions are added to fees of the office. These fees amounted to $10,212, indicating more than $400,-000 had been collected for the State from this source.

After deducting office expenses and the judge's compensation, a surplus of $19,811 exists which the court will be required to turn over to the Board of Education. Probate Judge's stated salary is $8000 a year, but in addition he is permitted to retain 10 per cent of the net excess receipts. According? ly, Judge Arnold's total compensation last year was $10,318.30.

In the previous report of the Probate Court made by Judge Arnold's predecessor, Charles W. Holtcamp, the total fees collected for the year 1934 were $116,080 and the Judge's compensation was $12,039. There was a net excess of $36,354. Judge Arnold collected $2400 in fees ac cruing to the previous administration for which he does not take credit in his report. A noticeable decrease in the collection of inherit ance taxes is indicated. It was said the decline was due to the fact there had been fewer administrations of large estates.

1935 INCOME TAX RECEIPTS IN MISSOURI GAIN $856,600

Auditor Reports $4,428,600 Collected, Third Largest Amount

Since Law Took Effect. JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. State income tax collections in Missouri in 1935 were $4,428,698, an increase of $856,647 over the total in 1934, State Auditor Forrest Smith announced today. The 1935 total was the third largest since the State income tax law became effective in 1917. The largest collection of the tax in one year was $4,794,495, in 1921, and the second largest $4,-608,933 in 1930. In both years the former flat tax rate of 1 per cent of net taxable income was in effect for both individuals and corpora-

The 1931 Legislature amended the law to increase the rate to 2 per cent for corporations, and established a graduated schedule of taxes for individuals, ranging from 1 to 4 per cent.

CITY DRIVER'S LICENSE

.9 Permits Suspended for Year, 4 for 6 Months and 3 for 60 Days, in January.

The first effective enforcement of the driver's license law began Fri-day, three months after the law was passed by the Board of Aldermen and signed by Mayor Dickmann. The clerks of the License Commission started keeping records of the convictions and the numbers of the licenses or receipts. Violations are not being entered on the backs of the licenses, as the Commission believes it to be unfair to penalize those who have already obtained their licenses and exempt those who have been tardy.

Police Judges Simpson and Vest are finding all persons who have failed to obtain their licenses $25, and staying the fine on payment of $3 court costs. The clerks are checking the numbers of some of the license receipts to make sure that the license was applied for by the person who presents the receipt.

The Judges started revcking licenses under the provisions of the ordinance Jan. 2. During the last month nine license have been resuspended for six months and three suspended for 60 days.

In Judge Simpson's Court. In Judge Simpson's Court, the following persons have been punished under the ordinance: Donald Walker, 2316 Allen avenue, license revoked for one year following a conviction for driving while intoxicated.

Harry Mueller, 3237 Michigan avenue, license revoked for one year; convicted of driving while intoxicated, careless driving, leaving the scene of an accident, operating an automobile with defective brakes and failing to obe; the directions of an officer.

William Hardester, 4254 Blaine avenue, license revoked for one year; convicted of careless driving and driving while intoxicated.

John Owens, 2701 St. Vincent avenue, license revoked for one year; convicted of careless driving and failing to drive on the right hand side of the street.

Roy Ferguson, 1210 Rutger street, license revoked for one year; convicted of driving while intoxicated and careless driving. Carl Hall, 2010 Branch street, license revoked for one year; con-victed on two charges of careless driving. Rubin Golden, 3931 Delmar boulevard, license revoked for one year: convicted of driving while intoxicat

Roy W. Hicks, 1438 South Eighteenth street, license suspended for 60 days; convicted of leaving the scene of an accident

Adolph Istwan, 3171A Nebraska avenue, license suspended for 60 days; convicted of careless driving. William Johnson, 3131 Bell avelicense suspended for months; convicted on two charges of careless driving.

In Judge Vest's Court. The following dispositions were made by Judge Vest T. Aloysius Farley, 1270 Hamilton avenue, license revoked for one year; convicted of driving while intoxicated, careless driving and leavfing the scene of an accident. Gilmore Yackey, 4740 Wren avemonths; convicted of careless driv-

Paul J. Wade (address not given), license suspended for six months; convicted of careless driving.

Sylvester Grosch, 4229 John avenue, license suspended for 60 days; convicted of careless driving. Judge Dickmann, hearing appeals of Police Court cases in the Court of Criminal Correction, imposed penalties under the driver's license law and stayed fines in the following cases:

Joseph Killoren, 2918 North Taylor avenue, license revoked for one year; convicted of driving while intoxicated.

Stuart Overlin, 1927 South Compton avenue, license suspended for six months; convicted of careless

The ordinance provides that any person convicted of driving an au-tomobile after his license has been revoked or suspended may be fined $500 and sentenced to six months in the Workhouse.

SAFETY COUNCIL AWARDS TO 25 MAIL TRUCK DRIVERS

Merit Cards Given Groups That Have Not Had Accident for 10 and 15 Years.

Fifteen drivers of United States mail trucks, who have had no ac-cidents during the last 15 years or more, received merit cards from the St. Louis Safety Council at a meeting last night in a hall at Shaw avenue and Kingshighway. Police Judge Joseph Simpson presented the cards. Ten drivers who have operated mail trucks without an accident in 10 years also received merit cards. In 1935, postoffice motor vehicles here traveled 2,033,237 miles, an increase of 15,688 miles over the preceding year. Speakers at last night's meeting included Postmas-ter W. Rufus Jackson and Oliver T. Remmers.

BEATS STARS OF 12 NATIONS; KIT KLEIN IS VICTOR TWICE

DAVOS, Switzerland, Feb. 1 .-Barely recovered from an attack of influenza, Delbert Lamb, 21-yearold landscape artist from Milwau-kee, defeated the premier speed skaters of 12 nations at 500 meters today and gave the United States an even break with Norway for the first two individual titles of the Unleashing a terrific spurt in the closing stages, Lamb flashed across the finish line in 42.6 seconds, equaled Clas Thunberg's listed world record for the distance, and defeated his, nearest rival, Hans Engnestangen of Norway, by three-tenths of a second.

None of America's five Olympic hopefuls, however, could match the speed and stamina of Ivar Ballan grud in the 5000 meters and the Norwegian ace romped off with that crown by a margin of nearly 10 seconds over Eddie Schroeder veteran Chicagoan.

The Americans made a fine show ing in the sprint, taking four of first six places, but only Schroeder finished among the leaders in the 5000 meters.

Pair in Brilliant Duel.

Under the international system of racing, in Paris, against time, Lamb George Krog of Norway as his racing partner and a brilliant duel ensued. First one, then the other gained the lead but Lamb's final sprint carried him across the finish line with feet to spare over the Norwegian. Lamb broke into a violent spell of coughing as he finished, a reminder that he had not yet entire ly shaken off the effects of his recent illness. Doctors were called to his assistance but said he would be entirely recovered by the time the winter Olympics start at Garmich-Partenkirchen next Thursday Lamb's time, although it equaled Thunberg's listed world record, was two-tenths of a second slower than the mark Allan Potts of Brooklyn set at Oslo recently. Engnestangen, clocked in 42.9, and Krog, timed in 43.1, took second and third places for Norway, but Potts and Leo Freisinger of Chicago tied for fourth at 43.4 sec-onds, and Bob Peterson of Milwaukee was sixth in 43.7.

Sudden Thaw Affects Ice A sudden thaw made ice conditions progressively worse as the heats of the 5000 meters were run off but Ballangrud made a show of all opposition in snaring the title. He was clocked in 8:32.5 as of 8:42 flat.

Birger Vasenius of Finland, 8:42.8; Michael Staksrud, Norway, 8:53.5, and Willy Sandtner, Germany, 8:55, won the next three places. Peterson was ninth in 9:27.4; Lamb 27th in 9:35.2; Froisginger, 35th in 9:54.2, and Potts 39th in 10:47.7.

Ballangrud held the lead in points at the end of the first day of the two-day competition with the low total of 95.25. Vasenius was second, Schroeder third, Staksrud fourth. Engnestangen fifth and American contingent. Lamb was tenth, Freisinger 27th and Potts

BASKETBALL, which skidded into the red, a few seasons ago, is coming back into the realm of self-sustaining college sports. In many institutions the 1936 basketball squad will show a good profit. In the East basketball in Mad-

Basketball will be on the Olympic program for the first time in history, this year: and has that fact pepped up the boys! A trip to Europe is the goal. The climax of the American season will occur early in April when the Olympic trials will be held in New York. Teams from coast to coast are interested in these trials in which the best college fives will compete against the winners of A. A. U. and Y. M. C. A. championship tournaments. The Middle West, always strong in basketball, is almost certain to be represented, although the East has improved its status con siderably in the last two years, observers say. The winning team, strengthened by picked men from other strong groups, will make the journey to Berlin under the direction of the coach of the winning team. As a result, basketball play this year will probably reach a peak eldom before attained. In the Middle West at this time Notre Dame and Purdue are among the fives expected to figure prominently in the Olympic trials.

Taking the Sock Out of Soccer

TT APPEARS that despite an occasional inability to make the wayward fist behave, the sock is really being eliminated from municipal soccer. We have the authority of the Municipal Soccer Executive Committee for this statement and the figures it submits are convincing. These show that in 172 games played during the current season only seven were marred by fights that were called to the attention of the officials. In these 172 games 4128 players participated and of all this total only 13 players were disciplined for engaging in fistic combat In three of the parks (Fairgrounds No. 2. Sherman and Carondelet No. 1) a total of 1790 players participated in 75 games without a single fight.

The fightingest soccer field was that of Fairgrounds No. 4, where a total of three disturbances were recorded in 25 games, with seven players being penalized. The 1935-36 record, as a whole, is a considerable improvement over previous seasons and was directly brought about by the especial attention devoted to this fea-

Bearing Down.

A T the outset of the Municipal Soccer season this year, the governing officials were fully aware of the conditions that had existed previously," comments a letter to the editor of this column, from the Executive Committee, "and made every effort to eliminate the disagreeable situations that have occurred in the past. The managers and players were given to understand that rowdyism and any unsportsmanlike conduct would be dealt with summarily.

"The executive committee even went so far as to extend the jurisdiction of referees to the club houses, so that any arguments and disturbances between halves or after the game would come within the jurisdiction of the officials assigned to the game.
"We believe the figures submitted show conclusively that Muni-cipal Soccer has been conducted on an unusually high plane this year; and that the players and the officials who handled them are to be commended rather than condemned."

That's a seven-league stride toward taking the sock out of soc cer. Continuation of this "bearing down" will certainly remove "any impression that hooliganism prevails in municipal soccer"an impression well-grounded by the experiences of previous sea-

OTTSEN SECOND extra

SEVERAL troublesome "if" hurdles confront the New York Giants as they look forward to the 1936 baseball campaign, but Bill Terry's team has started the spring season by distributing the most gorgeous training camp roster that ever dazzled the eyes of members of the Baseball Writers' Association of America. The roster, containing more statistical information about the players than any other club offers to the scribes, is bound in what might be described as gargeous blue paper plush and would do credit to the Nut Cup, Sherbet, Yearbook and Table Favor Committee of your most meticulous sorority. Besides containing the spring training schedule of the Giants and a comprehensive table of the players' 1935 performances, the booklet also includes the New York National League team's yearly interclul won an lost record, starting with 1883. This record shows that only three times in the last 20 years have the Giants finished worse than third in the pennant race. In 1916, the Giants ran fourth; they finished fifth in 1926 and sixth in 1932, the year Terry took over the managerial reins. In the 20 years the Giants have won six pennants and since 1883 they have finished on top 13 times.

GETTING down to prospects, the Terry roster for 1936 would indicate that the fate of the Giants depends largely on the pitching staff and especially on three young pitchers and two vet-

Terry doesn't have to worry about his catching. In Gus Mancuso he has a tireless and capable receiver, and Harry Danning will be available for the few games that Gus doesn't catch. Last season Mancuso was in 128 contests. Terry need feel no concern about his infield. He will be at first base himself and he is the best first sacker in the league. Burgess Whiteheau, an agile cat, will be at second base, Dick Bartell at short and Tr 's Jackson at third. Mark Koenig, the veteran, Smoky Joe Martin, a young wild horse, and Charley English ok like the infield reserves. If there are infield worries at all for the Giants they center around Jackson's knees, which wobble freely a times, and the questioned ability of Whitehead to play a full season at top speed. However the Giants seem to have sufficient batting power to carry Whilehead, even if he does fall down in his hitting. The Giants have an excellent outfield in Melvin Ott, Hank Leiber and Joe Moore. It could be called the best in the league, everything considered. Each mem ber of the regular trio can knock the ball out of any park. Each is a good fielder and Moore and Ott have arms of unusual accuracy. Leiber, not as experihas a strong ar not as accurate. In George Davis, former Phillie and Cardinal, and James Ripple, a recruit from Montreal. Terry has sufficient reserve strength in the outfield. New York's pennant chances, therefore, would seem to depend on the pitching strength.

team won the world title in 1933, with Hubbell, Schumacher, Parmelee and Fitzsimmons carrying the pitching hod. Fitzsimmons had arm trouble will go to camp this spring with a conditional contract. He therefore is an unknown quantity. Parmelee has been traded to the Cardinals for Whitehead.

Man Power Is There.

W HO is going to take up the slack for Terry? If Fitzsimmons comes back, it will be a big break for the Giants. Bill still has Hubbell and Schumacher and Clydell Castleman has indicated that he could carry a goodly share of the load. New York optimists will find it easy to see a pennant at the end of the 1936 trail. All they have to do is to

Hubbell Schumacher, Castleman and Fitzsimmons traveling at toj speed. Then add a little help from Frank Gabler, Harry Gumbert and Al Smith, the three important youngsters on the staff and a bit of air-tight relief pitching from Dick Coffman and Fred that you won't be able to see anybody else with binoculars. Of course it can happen. Terry has been fortunate with his young pitchers. Schumacher and Parmelee came through for him in 1933. Then he developed Castleman. He may have the same luck with Gumbert and Gabler. Or if you don't want to call it luck, perhaps it will develop again that Mr. Terry's judgment was profound-

From Balt to Brai.

I N the spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to subjects gay, and P. A. T. here wants to tell you, how his turned to Balt and Brai.

"Dear Extra Innings:
"Ordinarily, I am the sort of lug who can take my encyclopedia or leave it alone (How are you at returning borrowed books?) but recently I noticed a volume of that work bearing the winsome title, Balt to Brai, and with thoughts conjured by that name, I took a gander (Remember, sauce for the goose, too) at its contents to get a brief outline of the plot. It turned out to be just another wrestling story, but under the general heading of a glossary of baseball terms I unearthed some useful information. "For instance, under the letter H of this glossary, I found-'Half Inning: Exactly half an inning. Now, that ought to be clear to anyone. A half inning isn't Ju-lius Solters swinging three bats, it isn't six hundredweight of hard coal, and it isn't an Ethiopian fuddle bird. (Ah, you have traveled). A half inning is a half inning, and I hope they've made that plain.

"Farther down there is this bit of whimsy-'Foul Strike: First and second fouls against a batter called strikes.' I suppose, if the fouls were against a batter called Schleperman they wouldn't count. Somewhere is a sampan full of knowledge in this erudition-First Strike: First strike called by umpire against batter'. Of course, you've probably guessed that 'drop' is the 'Term to describe drop in thrown ball.' In other words and in the manner stated above, a ficaria, my friends, is a ficaria. Certainly you understand now. (You wandered a bit from Balt and Brai. The court wouldn't like that).

A Two-Ply Swat.

SHOULD have been waiting I for the next gloss—'Second Strike: That following the first,' which appears to be about right to me. The definition of 'Twoto wit: 'Same as two-bagger.' The only point that might give the reader a slight bit of trouble is the authors forgot to list and give the meaning of 'two-bagger.' "There is some confusion, to me at least, in the duties of a few of the players. The first baseman is the 'player stationed at first base,' but second and third basemen have much more work because each must be the 'guardian' of his hase (What, no gloss on hot corner!) Also, the right fielder is the 'player who guards right field,' which is simple enough; but the left fielder 'guards the territory of left field.' I thought that all those territories had been made states.

"As a result of this examination, I am taking this book to the Island of Yak and trying it on the natives. If they can understand anything about baseball after reading it over-then I'm wrong. (They're not interested in baseball, if you care to know. The children there all play Yaks.) Or maybe it should have been Balt to Bray. P. A. T."

Track Experts Rate 1935 Two-Year-Olds As Poorest in Years

Th 1936 race for three-year-old honors appears to be as open as the race for the Republican presidential nomination. Each year racing unofficially acclaims three champions: the two-year-old, the ree-year-old and the champion of the older or handicap horses.

n 1935 the selection of Discovery to head the handicap division and omaha as the best three-yearold was undisputed but the argument as to which was the best two-year-old still goes on. Since the new 1936 crop of two-year-olds have just come of racing age on summer, their relative merits are yet of little interest to racing fans and the abilities of the older horses pretty well known. It is therefore the three-year-olds that furessarily great three-year-olds. Some colts like Man O' War are great as two-year-olds and train or to be even greater three-year-olds. Others turn out to be only sprinters and weaken in the stretch when they try the longer distances. Others do not possess the extreme speed required to win at short distances but have the endurance needed to win races at distances of more than a mile. Cavalcade ranked eleventh among the moneywinning two-year-olds of 1933, winning only two races worth $11,805 the Jockey Club, and is a copy of and Discovery won only two over-night races. Nazimova as Mrs. Alving After 30 Years of Study

Russian Actress Coming to American Tomorrow Night in Revival of Ibsen's "Ghosts" First Played Minor Role of Regina.

THE production of Ibsen's "Ghosts," which Mme. Alla Nazimova will bring to the American Theater for a week beginning tomorrow marks the fulfillment of a 30-year-old ambition of the Russian actress to play the role of Mrs. Alving.

For although "Ghosts" was the first of a long succession of Ibsen dramas in which she built her reputation, she started out as Regina, the maid in the play. She was a young girl in Russia when she was cast for the part, had just graduated from Stanislavsky's Art Theater in Moscow and had translated the play from the German,

It was with the same Russian company, that Paul Orleneff, and in the same role, that she came to America in 1905 to the old Windsor or Kalich Theater in New York. Even in so small a part, she won the praise of the critics, who perdicted a great future for

The career itself came in this country. Having learned English in five months in preparation for her New York debut, Nazimova was later able to play leading roles in "Hedda Gabler," "A Doll's House," "Little Eyolf," "The Master Builder" and "The Wild Duck"

America knows her, too, for "Bella Donna," "War Brides," " 'Ception Shoals" "Dagmar" and "The Cherry Orchard" as well as recent Theater Guild plays, such as "The Simpleton of the Unexpected Isles,"

"The Good Earth." "A Month in the Country," and "Mourning Becomes Electra." Fifteen years ago, she was one of the silent screen's exotic stars, but she left Hollywood before the talkie era.

AST spring she was invited to be guest star for Robert Hen-derson, sponsor and director of the Ann Arbor and Milwaukee Dramatic Festival and "unwillingly," according to her own state ment, agreed to do a revival of about playing Mrs. Alving and planned and studied for it," the star said in an interview since the beginning of the present tour. "I was determined someday to play the part but not until very recently did I feel that I had acquired the poise and skill. I believe that the character becomes a part of breathes, thinks and behaves not only in that particular play but in any situation imaginable."

Nazimova staged the play herself and directed the eight weeks' rehearsals. Using the William Archer translation of "Ghosts," she has seen fit to make the conclusion of the play even more definite than

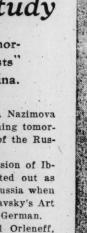

It will be recalled that "Ghosts" is built on a "sins of the fathers" theme, showing how a wealthy voman makes a martyr of herself throughout years of marriage to a dissolute husband, for her son's sake, only to discover that the boy suffers from an incurable disease

When first played in 1881, "Ghosts" aroused a storm of abuse all over Europe. George Bernard Shaw in "The Quintessence of Ibsenism" lists some of the epithets made to "Ibsen's positively abominable play called 'Ghosts,' "this disgusting representation," "candid foulness," "Ibsen's melancholy and malodorous world," "literary car-"repulsive and degrading work." The play was characterized "merely dull dirt long drawn out" with "characters either contradic-tory in themselves, uninteresting or orrent" and one dramatic publication said, "Ninety-seven per cent of the people who go to see 'Ghosts' are nasty-minded people who find the discussion of nasty subjects to their taste in exact proportion Ibsen himself was in doubt about the piece and wrote to a Danish newspaper editor about a month after its appearance. "It may well spects rather daring but it seemed to me that the time had come when Ruth Chatterton, "Lady of Secrets" some boundary-posts required to be moved." Many students today hold it to be his greatest work, his nearest approach to Greek tragedy and formally, the most perfect presentation of any of the subjects he saw fit to discuss.

N THE cast are McKay Morris, ormer Theater Guild player, as Pastor Manders; Harry Ellerbe, young stage actor who recently appeared in the film. "So Red the ose," as Oswald Alving; Beatrice de Neergaard, a cousin of Eva Le Gallienne and former member of the Le Gallienne company, as Regina, and Raymond O'Brien, vet-

"Petrified Forest" Shows CORNER TAKEN BY Value of Good Writing

Screen Adaptation of Robert Sherwood Play Unique Among Current Dramas - Capably Performed by Leslie Howard, Bette Davis.

By COLVIN McPHERSON. HE PETRIFIED FOREST," at the Orpheum, is just different from the run of motion pictures, and the statement goes for all types of patrons, for those who saw six shows last week as well as those who regard the talkies as an interesting new development. For come another zero fortnight, ground-hog's day or spring, there is likely not to be another screen drama like it. It is the happy mutation that may lead to an entirely new species of films it may share the fate of "Outward Bound," about which, also, may praiseful phrases were written. In a roadside restaurant in an Arizona desert, not far from that wonder of silicification for which "The Petrified Forest" is named, a strange group of people are brought together-a disillusioned writer, a waitress who loves the poetry of Francois Villon and longs to study painting in France, an ex-football hero now the strong arm for a gasoline pump, a wealthy couple driving from Dayton to Los Angeles, an old timer-all these at the mercy of a gang killer named Duke Mantee. The climax of the drama is a fight with the Sheriff's posse, bullets spattering the canned goods on the shelf, and providing the opportunity for the soulsick writer to give his life that the little waitress may realize her dream, whatever it is worth. For the greater part of the time, therefore, "The Petrified Forest" is hardly more than a strained conversation with everybody seated. That this hazard is passed success. fully is proof of the writing. Robert Sherwood's Broadway play of last season has been followed closely and the dialogue is as much in contrast to the usual Hollywood effort as Dostovevsky is to Harold Bell Wright. Sherwood not only has threaded a narrative which he ties in a knot at its tragic finish, but he has seen fit to comme in each of his characters, on the battered ideals of today. He ha given the actors something to work with and has banished thereby the mere symbols of humanity which Hollywood exhibits week after week. Leslie Howard handles the hopeless, but not humorless, writer with perfect skill. Bette Davis, offering a contrast to her usual characterizations, is innocent, unspoiled and distinctly worth the gallant Chamlee, Edith Mason gesture. Humphrey Bogart is Mantee, an amazing revelation of In "Traviata" April 16 physically and morally exhausted desperado. My hat is off to Genvieve Tobin, as the wealthy Mrs. Chisholm, and to the dusky game ster of the piece-Slim Johnson, I think his name is-for their sincerity. In fact, I find only one flaw in "Petrified Forest." Its roles, will be the opening opera of scenic artists seemed to think the setting was the painted desert, ap-St. Louis Opera Company's parently, and hang up some uncouth canvas here and there, but the spring season at the Municipal Au- fault is a very minor, even if inexcusable, one. butante who is being taken home to marry the big bad wolf. Ethel Merman is on the passenger list as head of a traveling revue unit, and Arthur Treacher is Miss Lupino's guardian. The rollicking round fun, the thousand and one quips may be barely referred to, but the privilege is offered of hearing them all together, before the quickies get 'em. The Cole Porter music stays with the show, although much is made of a new song, "Sailor, Beware," really delightful in the Crosby rendition. Bing, whom I have long admired as the nearest thing to mechanical perfection, blossoms out as a dandy comedian. The whole show is more mirth-provoki than anything since "Ruggles of Red Gap."

PROFESSIONAL SOLDIER. Victor McLaglen has been taking so many bows over "The Informer" that if he relaxes by standing straight up after "Professional Soldier," it will not be frowned on. The new venture, at Loew's, is one of those "whimsical" things of Damon Runyon's which Hollywood never seems to get. Victor, as the adventurer who starts more revolutions than foreign capital can check up for itself, is hired to kidnap his majesty, Freddie Bartholomew, from one of the tail-enders in the League of Nations. Follows an attachment between the lad and his abductor, with Victor effecting a restoration singlehanded. In parts, "Professional Soldier" is most charming. When Victor wrecks a Parisian cafe, when he teaches Freddie a few tricks of American boys, the show is all right. But to have bright a boy as Freddie unfamiliar with the manner of obtaining milk from a cow is only crude. It may be said that the mannerly little man performs regally, and that McLaglen does his best. "Exclusive Story" is the comrade in arms to "Professional Soldier." It shows By Mummers Twice how Stuart Erwin and Franchot Tone uncovered a gang of racketeers, and solved the mystery of a boat like the "Morro Castle." May someone high-up be praised for the opportunities which Stuart Er-66THE FIELD GOD," by Paul win receives!

We think the house alone cost over $10.

located between Bristol and high schools. We think the house alone cost over $10,-000 to build and it is in good condition. The bare ground is probably worth $10,-000, because there are two 100-foot lots. (The house is on one lot, so the other lot could be sold off if desired.) Yet we can probably sell this choice property for $10,500. Key at TREMBLEY-WILSON.

missed by HUSBAND AND CHILDREN.

GOHLFING, CARRIE—In loving memory of our loving mother, who departed this life Jan. 30, 1935.

What would we give her hand to clasp. Her patient face to see—To hear her voice, to see her smile, And in her days that used to be. But some sweet day we'll meet again Beyond the toil and strife And clasp each others hand once more In heaven, that happy life. Sadly missed by CHILDREN AND GRANDCHILDREN.

SCHROEDER, KATE — In memory of our dear mother, died Feb. 4, 1931 dear mother, died missed by HARRY, WILL, REGINA.

STEMME, OSCAR G.—In loving memory of our father, Oscar G. Stemme, who passed away Jan. 23, 1935:

No more his kind and loving face
Shall light the gloom of home.
Yet sweet the thought that we shall meet
When we shall cease to roam,
Sadly missed by his bereaved wife,
LILLIAN STEMME. VETTER-DECKER, LIZETTE—In loving memory of our dear mother, who passed away Jan. 29, 1935. Sadly missed by CHILDREN.

WEAVER, LILLIE S .- In loving memory of my dear wife and mother, passed of my dear wife and mother, passaway Feb. 4, 1934.
Gone but not forgotten.
Sadly missed by HUSBAND AND SONS.

SALESMEN WANTED

SINCERE MEN OF THOUGHT AND ACTION Within the past few weeks, I have hired several men in St. Louis and surrounding territory who, today, will tell you they are in the most pleasant and profitable work of their lives. Maybe you, too, will meet our requirements and find that a connection with us will prove profitable to you.

We are painstakingly careful in the wording of our ads to see that no misweading statements are made—we know men are skeptical today—they have a right to be. We tell you our company s financially sound. Our men are making more than just a good living, and ye ask you to investigate thoroughly. Ye tell you our company is growing apidly—that last year was our best ear in business. We have added men mid women when other manufacturers ere laying them off or reducing their iy. We have reduced no salaries nor id anyone off for several years, all of hich must convince you our mechanical ecialties are not the ordinary kind, here must be something unusual about the history was so far is the hest in the last in the search of the must be something unusual about the state of the search of the search of the something unusual about the search of which must convince you our mechanical specialties are not the ordinary kind. There must be something unusual about them. This year so far is the best in our history. We are breaking previous months' production records month after month right here in St. Louis and vicinity. Our products are something new, the need of which is universal and the demand greater than you can possibly imagine until you have seen and investigated them for yourself.

We have nothing to sell you. If you are acceptable, we do not ask you to do anything that other men in St. Louis are not doing successfully each day, but we do most emphatically state, if you meet our requirements as to character, references, etc., we will give you as good, if not a better, opportunity than you have ever had to make a good, honest, honorable living for yourself and your family, on a compensation plan of bonus plus liberal commission, with no investment of any kind from you. The work is dignified and pleasant, and you will be glad to look your friend in the eye and tell him about it. The pay is exceptionally good.

If you earnestly want a job or pportunity to better yourself, and opportunity to better yourself, and are willing to put sincere thought and action into your work, we will be glad to meet you personally Monday morning, 9:15 to 1:15 at 512 Paul Brown Bldg., 9th and Dlive Sts.

The six pioneers, she related, were Mother Febronie Fontbonne and Sister Delphine Fontbonne, nieces of Mother St. John Fontbonne, superior general in France; Sisters Febronia Chapelon, Felicite Boute, Philomene VIlame and St. Protas Deboile. They were from 21 to 31 years old. They left their Mother House Lyons, Jan. 3, 1836, accompanied by Abbe Jacques Fontbonne, brother Orleans March 6. Joseph Rosati, first Bishop of St. Louis, asked them to come to his diocese, and they arrived here by steamboat March 25.

Three went to Cahokia to teach and three went to Carondelet, then a small log-cabin village. There they lived in a two-room cabin on the site of the present Mother House, opened the only school in the village, and took care of orphans. The next year they were reinforced by two more nuns from France, Sister Celestine Pommerel, who later became Mother General in America, and Sister St. John Fournier. In October of that year they received their first postulant, Ann Elizabeth Dillon, daughter of a St. Louis merchant.

Bill to Remodel Immigration Laws Which Protect Criminals But Penalize Worthy Aliens

Commissioner MacCormack Says Under It, 30,000 of Vicious Type Could Be Deported and Parting of Families Be Prevented.

ENITO MUSSOLINI, tempestuous and ornate, a blacksmith's son, the creator of modern Italy and the author of the Abyssinian war, was born July 29, 1883, at Dovia di Predappio, a village in the Romagna. . . His father, a revolutionary Socialist, was the anarchist of the village square, yes; but no tragedy occurred in Mussolini's life to compare with the execution of Lenin's older brother, or Pilsudski's. His mother, a school teacher, like the mothers of all great men was an exceptional woman. . . . The chief personal influence on Mussolini as a young man was probably that of a Russian exile in Switzerland, Madame Angelica Balabanov. She took care of him in his early revolutionary day, mended his health, gave him food of both the body and the spirit. Mussolini, a bricklayer, apparently met Lenin through Balabanov. Years later Lenin re buked the Italian Socialists for having "lost" Mussolini, their best man,

Every man is an arena, a pool, of forces Those in Mussolini's early life were mostly literary and intellectual. Voraciously intelligent, he read Marx, Hegel, Machiavelli, Kant, Nietzsche, Pareto, Sorel. He absorbed them like a blotter. From Nietzsche he learned to hate the mob, from Marx to love it. He records that in his early days he kept a medallion of Marx in his pocket.

The son of Alessandro Mussolini (who named him after Benito Juarez, the Mexican revolutionist who ordered the execution of the Emperor Maximilian) and of Rosa Maltoni, who was the school teacher of the village, he grew up in the most crushing poverty. He never tasted coffee until he was

"MUSSOLINI'S foreign policy had been, on the whole, a failure. He had a difficult straddle to perform; Italy, one of the victor Powers, wanted treaty revision just the same. The French blocked him off from Tunis; his penetration of Albania was a costly and not very lucrative experiment; his Four Power Fact. an attempt to form a sort of 20th century Holy Alliance on quasi-revisional grounds, was stillborn; he extended his sphere of influence to Austria and Hungary only at the price of losing German friendship; he played the wrong side in pot boiling, and was defeated by a Balkan pact virtually uniting Yugoslavia, Rumania, Turkey and Greece against him. * * * *

Like all dictators, Mussolini was "a prisoner f prestige." He had to keep on doing some thing. Hitler was stealing far too much space from him in world headlines. * * * *

Wilson was facing the supreme decision and all available sources show that he made it on his own responsibility. When it was made, he confessed privately, and later in public, the factors that proved compelling. Never did he refer, so far as our evidence goes, to any of the commercial arguments advanced by Mr. Page. Never did he intimate that material interests had the slightest influence in the decision he reached. "Nothing except the abandonment of the U-boat campaign," said Bernstorff, "could have prevented war." Wilson confessed the same thought to the editor of the World (Frank Cobb of the New York World) on the eve of his war

We have decided to give Mrs. Roosevelt a present. It is Mr. Pepys' diary. Mrs. Roosevelt is a woman Seymour shows from German documents that the of many attainments, but when it comes to writing XVI. On the day the Bastille fell, he made an entry in his diary. It was one word: "Rien," meaning "nothing." Nothing happened that day.

We expect a good deal more from Mrs. Roosevelt, however, and we are not getting it. The other day, for example, her diary opened with this line: "Does it ever strike you how very egotistical we all are?" That is not in the Pepysian manner. What we want is an opening line something like this: "Alarm clock rang at 7:30. I turned over and slept until 9." Or: "We had prunes for breakfast again. Must give the cook fits." Mrs. Roosevelt goes on to tell about the murals in the Postoffice Building and what she thought of them. She even quotes a statistic, viz., 1 per cent of Federal building funds may be spent for murals. A diary is no place for statistics.

The best part of that day's diary was slurred over at the last. Mrs. Roosevelt entertained Miss Thelma Cazalet, "a member of Parliament from one of the poorer districts in London, and then I received about 450 people at tea." Did Miss Cazalet stay for tea? How does it seem to have a tea in the form of a mass meeting? Did the guests have tea and toast, or muffins or cakes or what? What was the gossip? On these and other really important questions, Mrs. Roosevelt is disconcertingly silent.

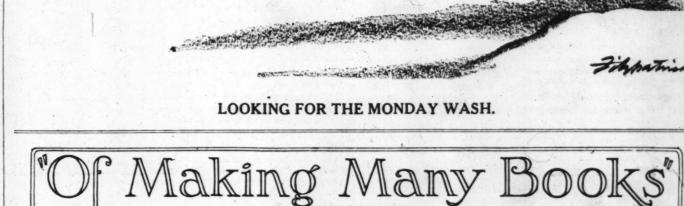

We are going to send her that Pepys.

RANKLY, John Erskine is worried. It's about the ladies. So long as he confined his attention to woman in the abstract-Helen, Penelope, Isolde, Eve-the going was easy, and his airily shrewd discussions of the "Sphinx Without a Secret" delighted bestsellerdom. But he has been taking a closeup view of late, and he has perceived an alarming difference between timeless woman in the abstract and modern women in the concrete.

Don't get him wrong at the outset. He is by no means a misogynist. On the contrary, he likes women very much-that is, he likes them individually. But "women in the group, women organized, women on the march, women militantly out for the "wider influence"-they terrify him. He perceives that "the best part of woman's nature refuses to go into the common pool"; that "the influence which women exercise in the mass is funny when not distressing, distressing when not pernicious": and that "to realize her true talent for inspiration, woman should be isolated."

It is the avowed purpose of the present opus to "inquire into the causes which induce women to exchange their unique powers of inspiration as individuals for the de-batable influence of a group." Beginning with the status of woman in pioneer society when husband and wife were equal partners in the creation and maintenance of the home, the author points out, what was already well known, the economic process by which a very large section of the feminine contingent was robbed of its ancient function and transformed into a leisure class supported by the labor of its men. who, Mr. Erskine boldly suggests, are virtually in a condition of slavery, since they give much and receive little or nothing in return. This, he fully admits, is conspicuously true only in the upper economic levels beginning in the middle class; but he insists that the general trend is in that direction throughout our society, notwithstanding the fact that large numbers of women earn their own

"I have nothing but admiration," says Mr. Erskine, "for the housekeepers and the mothers in the home, and for those who earn their living in competition with the men. I am objecting to the power exercised on our society by the comparatively idle women who give little and accept a good As a result of the modern status of woman, Mr. Erskine perceives that our culture is highly feminized throughout its whole range. In education, religion, literature, art, the feminine temper dominates, as he undertakes to show, and advertising, to be successful, must appeal to the women. He even goes so far as to argue that the conspicuous lawlessness of our times is germane

Well, what to do about it? So long as Mr. Erskine is concerned with the question, "How come?" he seems lucid enough for purposes of popularity. It is when he launches into the matter of a cure for the social maladjustment in question that he seems to grow a bit vague-vague enough, perhaps, for popularity in the present stage of social understanding. The cause, he found, was economic; but the cure, it seems, is not. We must, he believes, change the character of our education, free it from feminine influence, teach our boys to be masculine. The obsession with symptom-doctoring as a means of curing our sick society is symptomatic of our present addled condition. Is that also traceable to our feminized culture? If so, certainly Mr. Erskine's discussion has a feminine ending!

A LAYMAN LOOKS AT THE LAW AND LAWMAKERS. By Lewis Smith. (B. D. Smith & Bros., Pulaski, Va.)

A LTHOUGH written by a layman, this book should interest lawyers who are trying to cleanse the profession. It is perhaps the most comprehensive collection of views on the subject of the shortcomings of lawyers, and especially the lawmakers, that has recently appeared.

The author says America is "ruled by an oligarchy of 175,000 lawyers," that in place of the ideal government "of the people, by the people, for the people," we have, both in states and nation, 'a government of the lawyers, by the lawyers, for the lawyers." He believes that our courts and lawmakers are falling far short of conscientious public service. And he makes certain suggestions for changing these conditions, in the public

In support, he has collected, and here reprinted, a very large number of expressions by well-known publicists and editorial writers, which of themselves give the book interest for the general reader who sympathizes with the effort to purge the legal profession and bring our judicial system more in accord with that of Great Britain, where the courts are usually uninfluenced by polities, and the procedure is orderly, governed by reasonable rules and noted for meting out justice without long delays and legal

Many instances are cited of the astonishing abuses in our court procedure. An outstanding instance was the turning of the Hauptmann trial into a sort of three-ring circus. English lawyers were astounded at this burlesque, although they did not believe the jury was greatly influenced by it. As is well known, Hauptmann's lawyers and friends are still trying to take advantage of the silly proceedings of the lawyers in the

The book covers a great deal more than the title indicates. The author gives his views on bureaucracy, propaganda, pen-sions, relief, prison reform, paroles, the problem of death on the highways, etc. His editorial selections will amuse the reader occasionally, as well as interest. H. M. W.

CLEARLY, Jimmy Golden wasn't cut out Cfor a hero, either physically or temperamentally, and when the draft, like a vast dragnet, swept him into the war along with millions of others, he was terrified.

"You could be as small as 'Op o' My Thumb and you'd be as big as h'any giant in the world with a gun in your 'and!" he was told by the hard-boiled British Sergeant, fresh from the front. But there was little illumination in the words for heart-sick Jim my until the day when ironical fate, in an especially playful mood, arranged the hero business for him.

Perhaps it was a sense of outrageous indignity, perhaps it was the maddening sting of a flying splinter; most likely it was both. But, anyhow, when the barrage, forerunning the German advance, broke about Jimmy in the latrine, where a goodly supply of hand-grenades had been stored, the Sergeant's words took on enormous meaningand from the gray, flame-smeared whirl of a bad dream, haunted by the ghostly figures of the swarming foe, Jimmy emerged a hero, with medals on his chest.

But when Jimmy returned to the dull little country town of his origin, somehow the hero business didn't click. Pop and Mom were very proud of him, and a few of the neighbors said fine things that cost them nothing. But Jimmy's job was gone, and nobody seemed to need a hero for any sort of work. And the time came, as no doubt it came to others in a similar predicamen. when Jimmy remembered about the equalizing power of a gun; and so Jimmy turned

AND UP .. AT REGULARLY SOLD AT $18 Now Only

C OLLABORATING in this important program to stimulate nation-wide interest in the purchase of fine works of art, the fortyseven eminent artists listed at the left are offering, through Associated American Artists, their genuine, original, individually signed, perfect etchings at this unheard-of low price of $5.00. Works of the same calibre and size by these same distinguished artists regularly sell at $18.00 and upwards.

Five Prize Winners Included

Five of the etchings offered are prize winners. The edition of each of these etchings is strictly limited. Some of the etchings previously offered in this program have already increased in value to several times their price of only $5.00. We will at any time buy back any etching in good condi-tion and pay at lease the $5.00 you paid for it. These are not studio-worn prints, but etchings spe-cially created and selected by a jury for this program. The etchings offered are not small. Plate size average 8 by 11 inches. Some are larger. Mount sizes: 14 by 18.

Ready for framing, or for the collector's port-olio, the etchings now offered at this remarkably low price embrace a wide variety of marine, land-scape, sporting, nature and character studies—in techniques ranging from the finest of the classics to the most desirable of the modern schools.

Free Catalogue

Every lover of fine etchings should acquaint himself at once with this unusual opportunity. An interesting Free Catalogue has been prepared, illustrating photographically the prints now available and containing biographical data on each artist's career and awards. Send only 10c in stamps to cover mailing costs, and a copy will be sent to you. Do so without delay, for the supply is limou. Do so wi

TRADE TRENDS

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—Prices continued to advance last week on the New York Cocoa Exchange. Active futures positions rose to an equivalent of around .10 of a cent a pound. The exchange reported that British shippers sold large quantities of Accra cocoa on an advancing scale with manufacturers constantly bidding higher for supplies.

Crude Oil—Trade circles believe there is a possibility of an early advance in prices in California due to the action of the pro rating committee of producers on calling for immediate observance of its curtailment program in California fields instead of Feb. 10 as previously planned.

Automobile Accessories—Plants special instead of Feb. 10 as previously planned. States of the current cold wave over much of the country.

Helping wheat prices to average moderately higher were reports that offerings of wheat abroad both by Canada and Australia were firmer. Winnipeg dispatches added that the Canadian Government Board was not selling any wheat, and that as a consequence no one else was anxious to sell. Meanwhile, notwithstanding that Washington reports on conferences looking toward currency expansion were sharply scanned by wheat traders, friends of higher prices admitted that for the moment there was little to cause any real enthusiasm on the part of speculative buyers.

More assurance would be felt, some abservers said, if May wheat would get established over the $1.02 level. On the other hand, the fact could not be gainsaid that the Liverpool market was higher than looked for, and that sterling, too, showed an upturn. LIQUIDATION BRINGS

LOWER COTTON RANGE

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—Cotton moved lower today under further liquidation. Yesterday's acut nervousness over the question of marketing the 12c loan cotton appeared to be subsiding somewhat and March cotton, after selling off to 11.03c, closed at 11.10c, or two points net higher. Later months closed 6 to 12 points net lower with the tone barely steady.

The March cemand was attributed to overnight reports from Washington indicating that officials had no intention of dumping 12c loan cotton on the market below that sevel. Feb. 1.—Mill feed futures were weak and irregularly lower in a quiet market. Closing price changes for local deliveries were: Bran, 5c lower to 10c higher; gray shorts steady to 15c lower. For Chicago deliveries: Bran steady to 15c higher; standard middlings steady to 10c lower. Sales totaled 800 tons. that level.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 119,000 bales against98,000 last year.
Spot steady; middling, 11.60c,

Memphis Spot Cotton.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Feb. 1.—Spot cotton

First Annual Formal Party of Coaching Club, Which Is Modeled After England's "Old Twynkingham."

M EMBERS of the Claytonshire Coaching Club established what they intend to make a yearly custom when they held their first formal ball last night at the Deer Creek Club.

Guests, invited for after 10:30 o'clock, included about 100 contemporaries of members and approximately 50 older friends, parents and relatives. They were requested by the cards to come in "formal attire or pink coats if qualified." Dancing was confined to the large living room of the club around the walls of which painted posters of hunting scenes hung. of the coaching club-dark red and grey, worn as ties or hatbands on tallyho parties — predominated in the simple decorations. Music was provided by a 10-piece orchestra. A band of Serbian singers entertained guests during intermissions. Sup-per was served after midnight.

The club, founded in 1932 and patterned after England's 150-year-old institution, "Old Twynkingham," has heretofore limited its activities to holiday calls at countryside homes aboard tallyhos. The three pleasure coaches, named dled by professional drivers. The cold weather discouraged several members who originally planned to reach the ball last night by tallyho.

The affair was in charge of the five trustees of the club, who are: at the Park Plaza, and served as a maid of honor at the Veiled groom's brother-in-law, was best man. The ushers were: William A. Holmes and Tankerville J.

Now this is all very elegant and so pretty a play of fancy as one can want, but it is the sort of thing that is dotting the highways of the hand with signs "California sherry—be per cent alcohol—Wow, what a lick!"

There are, of course, sensible and wallistic champions of good drink-diag, like Frederick Wildman of Bellows & Co., and Frank Schoonmaker, who do all they can to deprecate prissy nonsense of sherry finking and such allied fruitery. Nobody has ever yet been spoiled for a bottle of Bordeaux by a clean Martini cocktail, and they say so right out loud. But there are a lot of precious comedians at large (we are the course, sween literally when

Unless you're a Millionaire you can't afford a cheap fur!

Like jewels, furs can fool you unless you're an expert. Money spent on bad furs is money thrown away. However it may gleam and glisten in the shop window . . . a month of wear will find it out . . . leave it cracked, matted, ratty, unattractive as only a cheap fur

So here's our advice. Buy QUALITY in furs. IT PAYS!

The less money you have, the less you can afford to make a poor investment. That's why Kline's has established a certain Quality Standard for each fur, below which we NEVER go. Any Kline Fur Coat . . . whether a Lapin (dyed coney) at $59.00 or a Mink at $2000.00 is a fur of honest QUALITY, chosen from the best of its kind. You will see cheaper furs advertised elsewhere at less than Kline prices, but they're not Kline Quality.

It isn't high-mindedness on our part, it's good business. We're going to sell your great-grand-daughter her first fur coat, you see. We're going to live a long while. And your confidence and good will is the breath of life to us. We find, and we think you'll find that, in the long run, buying QUALITY pays.

Safety for Driving Chief Factor in Car Buying, Ford Co. Finds

Construction Features Making for Safe Operation Determine of Ten Auto Sales.

Because of a mounting toll of accidents on the highways and boule- Annual Elaborate Showvards, automobile buyers, when shopping for their 1936 cars, are making safety a paramount con-sideration, local automobile dealers

At last, the dealers say, general newspaper campaigning has awak-ened in the motoring public an acute awareness of the necessity for safer driving. Accordingly, the dealers assert, safety features in the new cars have become the deciding factor in six out of 10 sales made today. Said M. N. Johnson, manager in

St. Louis for the Ford Motor Co.:
"In my opinion, one of the chief reasons for Ford's outstanding sales leadership in 1935-when over 1, 000,000 Ford cars and trucks were sold-was the careful attention which designers and engineers gave to safety in the Ford V-8 automo-body, a type of construction that is universally regarded as a safety factor of prime importance. The Ford body provides not merely a metal shell, but resembles more the steel girder and I-beam type of construction used in modern office buildings and railroad coaches.

"Lately, there has been a growthat steer lightly and easily. With mobiles on the road, quick wheel city traffic. In line with this trend, the Ford factory has given to the public a car that requires a minimum of 'driving pressure' to operate. There is a 25 per cent decrease in steering effort in the 1936

"The Ford Motor Co. does not experiment with safety, and the Ford V-8 sturdy brakes reflect that policy. They are the safest brakes made, of sure-acting mechanical de-sign, and they stop the car quickly and with certainty under all driv-

"The low center of gravity of the Ford V-8 is important for safety. The car 'hugs the road,' reducing sidesway and the chances of skid-

"The Ford V-8 motor performs more smoothly and silently than ever. Quietness of operation gives a greater driving steadiness, for a driver strained by a noisy motor is not the safest driver. The powrful motor offers a speedy pickup. Rapid pickup is as essential for driving safely as good brakes.

"These foregoing are a few fea-tures which make the Ford V-8 one of the safest, most reliable cars on the highways today."

SUNDAY MORNING, FEBRUARY 2, 1936_ Auto Dealers to Vote on Plan for Insuring Used Car Gross Profit

> N. A. D. A. Sets March 1 as Deadline Date for Acting Upon

A dead line of March 1 has been set for the automobile retailing trade to decide, by a vote of its 40,000 dealers, whether the National Automobile Dealers' Association shall proceed with a proposal to establish a gross profit in the used car department of the business. The proposal was approved by the N. A. D. A. board of directors at the recent annual meeting held in New

Jack Frost, general manager and executive vice-president of N. A. D. A., who presented the proposed program to the board, with the statement that it was legal and a practical way to stop present ruin-ous losses, said that contacts with manufacturers in the last few days clearly indicated their willingness to proceed if their various dealer groups so desire. The manufac-turers' final decision, however, he said, will rest solely upon the atti-tude of their various dealer out-Ballots for voting on the proposal, a boklet explaining it in detail, and a letter putting the proposition up to the dealers, will be in the hands of every dealer in America by today, he said, thus allowing 30 days for return of the ballots. If a dealer votes favorably on do ing his part in putting the program into effect, he will immediately be requested to sign a lawful bonded agreement to make regular reports, and to open his books and records for auditing by representatives of a central agency of nine trustees with the ultimate objective of establishing a monthly gross profit of 20 per cent in his used car de-

The central agency's functions of information back to the dealers and the audit of dealers' books at regular intervals, thus through education and advice, lead the management of the used car depart-ment from gross loss that now exness to a gross profit over a given

It is pointed out that gross profit does not necessarily mean a net upon the proper management of expense that must come out of the gross profit. "At the present time, trading and competitive conditions induce the dealer to allow more for a used car as a trade-in on a new car than he knows is possible to resell it for. This situation has caused the trade generally to finish the year's business with a net loss, the discount allowed on new cars not being sufficient to overcome the over-allowance on used cars," an N. A. D. A. state ment says.

SUPERCHARGER PERFORMANCE ... makes everything else seem tame

 The magic of the Supercharger does things to an engine that give it life and vitality and eager responsiveness far beyond the point to which an automobile engine has ever gone before. It gives Graham, the first and only supercharged car in the lower price field, a nimbleness, fleetness and instant acceleration at any speed that makes you think of a crack hockey line charging down the ice. There's the same unconquerable spirit, the same zest, the same quick spurt and surge of power.

And, surrounding this new spirit that lives beneath the hood, is a new beauty that sets Graham distinctively above the rest. Feast your eyes upon its lines, then take the wheel and let the magic of the Supercharger answer your hunger for something you simply can not get in other cars. of Rubber for Cars

Developed by Firestone from all the General Motors car mechanical manager, pointed out the importance of maintaining and bille. Buick, and Cadillac-La-Automotive Engineers by R. W. Brown, research engineer of the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co.

"This new Air Spring," said, "takes the automobile off buggy springs for the first time in its history and permits it to ride liter-'on air.

The Firestone air spring consists of an especially developed rubberized fabric bellows which is in-flated with air to carry any desired load. The bellows operate automatically in conjunction with an air reservoir by means of a pen-dulum shock absorption valve. The air reservoir and the bellows are connected by metal tubing.

"Laboratory tests over a period of months, and practical tests of the new air springs on test cars, show that the new suspension principle is sound and practical and provides solution of the problems on the old type of spring systems," said Brown. Brown said that a pendulumshock absorption valve swings outwardly when the car is rounding a turn, permitting a valve disk to close the passage to the new air reservoir. This effectively increases the pressure in the bellows, as the additional load, caused by turning, is applied. This also pre-vents the car body from inclining to the outside when driven on curves at high speeds. Similar action prevents "nosing down" when heavy brake applications are made.

"When the pendulum is vertical," Brown said, "the passage of air from the bellows to the reservoir is unrestricted because the tip of the pendulum engages an extension on the valve disk, thus holding it open. After the wheels pass over a road obstruction the bellows extend, reducing the pressure. The air flow from the reservoir to the bellows is restricted, thus providing desired shock absorption ac-

"The fact that the suspension unit is mounted more nearly at the level of the center of gravity reduces the tendency of the body to roll when rounding curves. The center of gravity in an automobile is near the center of the radiator Being attached near this centra point, the new air spring provides greater cornering stability.

"For the first time the full advantages of 'riding on air' are realized in a simple, rugged and pracical manner.

"The ability to adjust the suspension to the load without mechanical limitation and to provide any degree of softness desired to the ride, without interfering with steering, load capacity or ruggedness, commands the most serious consideration of those interested in providing better riding qualities in

New Air Spring for Autos

The Firestone air spring, embodying a new principle of automo-bile suspension and a "soft" ride with body stability, introduced to members of the Society of Automotive Engineers by its inventor, R. W. Brown, research engineer of the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. The air spring consists of an especially developed rubberized fabric bellows (1) which is inflated with air to carry the desired load. The bellows operate automatically in conjunction with an air reservoir (2) by means of a pendulum shock absorption valve (3). The bellows and reservoir are connected by metal tubing (4).

Only One Low Priced Car is FIRST in Everything that Counts

Terraplane alone among all popular low priced cars gives you this:

• Full 115-inch wheelbase.

• 195 inches over-all length.

• Most power—88 or 100 horsepower—with freedom from vibration at all speeds.

• Body all of steel, with seamless roof of solid steel.

• Most inside room -145 cubic feet-more leg and shoulder room, and widest rear seat.

• Completely new style—best insurance of the investment value of your car. • The only rear opening baggage and tire compartment on 5 and 6-passenger models that can be had in any low priced car without extra cost. Spare tire lies flat inside. • Duo-Automatic Hydraulic Brakes (patent applied for), two braking systems operating automatically from one brake pedal. And a third braking system from the easiest operating parking brake in the world. • Radial Safety Control (patent applied for) combining all the advantages of independent springing with a sturdy front axle-smoother riding, truer steering, safer stopping. • The Rhythmic Ride—the only long leaf springs with nothing to do but cushion your ride.

• The Electric Hand, optional at small extra cost, for finger tip shifting of gears without taking your hands from the steering wheel.

Front floor space clear of all levers. • Extra deep "V-type" windshield-for added beauty and wider vision.

In every other popular low priced car this is what you get:

• 2 to 6 inches less wheelbase.

• 5 to 121/2 inches less over-all length.

• 3 to 18 less horsepower than Terraplane's 88-and not nearly as smooth.

● Body only partly of steel—or steel body with "soft top."

• Less inside room—less showlder and leg room-narrower rear seats.

• 1935 styling, changed only it. details. Far more likely to be out of date by 1937. • No rear opening baggage and tire compartment, except in cars where trunk models are available-at considerable extra cost. Spare tire mounted outside on all other models. • Single main braking system—either hydraulic or mechanical-without complete reserve braking system and without Terraplane's type of easy acting parking brakes.

construction.

• Older type front end designs-either with or without solid axle-none of which combines gentle spring action with rigid axle

• Coil springs—or leaf springs, stiffened to carry steering and braking loads.

 Nothing like the Electric Hand is available. on any other low priced car-and all have floors in front cluttered up with gear and brake levers.

 Nothing like Terraplane's deep "V-type" windshield in any other low priced car.

Every 1936 car buyer in the low price field had just two choices. A Terraplane. Or a car without the features that Terraplane gives. That's why thousands are changing this year to Terraplane . . . stepping UP in everything

The list of Terraplane advantages doesn't stop with those listed here. There's greater ruggedness, proved by owner mileages of 100,000, 125,000 and more. Greater economy, too, certified by thousands of sworn owner statements . . . emphasized again just the other day in

TARANTULAS IN MISSOURI

New Facts

Once Dreaded Spider

Which Has

Recently Been Found

By ELLWOOD DOUGLASS Of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine Staff

TAN roadster with a Clayton license skidded, scattering gravel on an Ozark hilltop above Lake Taneycomo. The driver looked back; the girl looked, haps it was just "A tarantula," he said. "So help me, a tarantula. Want to see it?" Some 30 feet back, moving eight furry legs with the sedate deliberation of a creature with no enemies worth its notice, something dull and indistinct under the gaudy mountain sunset was crossing the road.

"Never believed this," muttered the driver, as they hurried back to inspect it. "Thought the bug men meant something else-some other big spider -when they wrote, 'Tarantulas are common in Missouri.' Guess they meant tarantula when they said taran-

"Isn't it beautiful?" marveled the glance from any other spider seen in this State, and in more than size. Its body was perhaps 2 1/2 inches long, with a leg-spread somewhat larger than the palm of a large man's hand. The body was symmetrical, tubular in contrast to the fat blob of the ordinary spider's body, brown, furred with a tracery of black and an appearance of softness rather than outright gloss. As it mobilized its miniature forest of legs with equal ease and deliberation in any direction, the spectators began to wonder which end was which. It paid no attention to them; as they have learned now-from the "bug men"-it probably could not see them.

"Got somethin' treed?" A hill farmer was trotting out from a house beside the road. "Don't get too close," he warned, slowing down abruptly as he saw what it was. "Them things can

"Dangerous?" asked the young man, standing back respectfully as his companion bent over the tarantula, her eyes screwed up in admiring scru-

"Many around here?" "Country's full of 'em," said the farmer, busily selecting pebbles from the roadside. "See dozens of them crossing the road every fall, along about the first frost. Guess they're looking for a place to dig in for cold weather."

As the roadster rolled on down the highway, its passengers looked back to see the farmer, at discreet distance, pelting the unhappy spider with the biggest rocks he could find. In Branson an hour later, a small boy was proudly showing a drugstore throng young woman. It was different at a another tarantula in a fruit jar, and a second jar held a venomous Black Widow spider.

But in that locality, even two tarantulas in one hour was hardly enough to uphold the generalization, "Tarantulas are common in Missouri." It is the southwest corner of the State.

TOT 40 miles below the border is Fayetteville, where a University of Arkansas "bug man" has studied a hillside tarantula colony for nearly 20 years, allowed himself to be experimentally bitten by tarantulas, scorpions, centipedes, Black Widows and other crawling nightmares, published his conviction that the native tarantula is harmless, if not quite painless and allows his child to play with one as a pet. It seemed that these "Shepherd of the Hills" tarantulas might be merely visitors from across the line. But that hypothesis lasted only until the next week-end. On the far side of the State, in the Eastern Ozarks, the tan roadster was drawn up beside a tomato red convertible on the bank of Current River for a two-hour walk to Blue Spring and return. On that walk two tarantulas-frightened from their burrows, perhaps, by the screaming clash of colors—were found scurrying across the footpath among the dead and make some studies of the rudimentary nervous mechanism serving the hexagonal eye set in the top of its curving back like a decklight on a power boat. His wife, a sane though scientific person, regarded him with a glance that was not merely quiz-

That was nearly 200 miles from Fayetteville, much, much too far to dismiss these supposedly tropical arthropods as merely "visitors." There was no doubt about it; they were Missourians. And then, at the meetings of the Association for the Advancement of Science a few weeks ago in St. Louis, when the Fayetteville "bug man." Prof. W. J. Baerg, opened the sessions of the Entomological Society of America, L. F. Pinkus of St. Louis followed him up with the report of catching 13 tarantulas in one day at Pevely, in 30 miles of St. Louis, and finding them every summer since 1932 in the old quarry at Osage Hills, on the very outskirts of the city. But even the bug men gave testi-

scooped it into a pail to take it home cism about tarantulas in Missouri-a tropical animal in a region where the mercury falls in winter to 22 degrees below zero. Pinkus, a science teacher in St. Lcuis public schools, hadn't believed it himself. The head of a Girl Scout camp near Pevely asked him what to do about tarantulas. Politely he agreed to look them over, while privately he wondered what sort of spider she was talking about.

N 30 minutes he had found his first tarantula, started to pick it up and hastily changed his mind. In a few hours he had several more. Since then he has collected dozens in 15 to 50 miles from St. Louis, and he keeps one, caught near Antonia on Old Lemay Ferry road, at his home, 5714 Rhodes avenue, as a pet.

They have been identified by the Yale University expert, Dr. Alexander Petrunkevitch, as belonging to three species, Eurypelma californica, Dugesiella hentzii and Psalmopoeus. The Eurypelma, as its species name indicates, is the common tarantula of Cal-rows, in nearly complete hibernation. Through the summer they ordinarily remain in the tunnel through the day and "hunt" at night. Their hunting, as Prof. Baerg describes it, reaches a new high in laborsaving, and a new low in production. They camp in the mouth of the burrow or a few inches from it and wait. Sometimes they wait for days. A fat cricket may wander within a third of an inch and be perfectly safe. But if it touches the tarantula, it's gone.

why residents of sections where they are common rarely see them except "along about the first frost."

Frost is not the point. The point is that September and October are the mating season. From October to late

March they remain deep in their bur-

The probable explanation for that is that the huge spider has wretched evesight. Scientists judge that it may be able to distinguish only light and dark, that its six-sided decklight of an eye enables it to see practically nothing in every direction. That renders improbable the legend of its prodigious spring-15 to 25 feet-since it literally isn't able to look before it

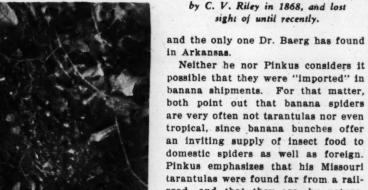

NKUS insits it never jumps. In many pages of scientific studies, the reporter found no leap recorded. It does not seem particularly alert, its mental organization is far below that of more common spiders of this section, and, while it certainly does not pull its punches when there's a meal to be gained, it does not seem especially aggressive. Hence Pinkus believes it is unlikely to become a dangerous pest. To be bitten, he points out, one would have to blunder into direct contact with it, and the chances of doing that, when it sticks so close to its home and builds ordinarily under a rock, are remote.

But he is not yet quite ready to accept the conclusion that its bite is harmless. Prof. Baerg has been experimentally chewed on by so many of its venomous kin that Pinkus does not believe he is any longer a good "human guinea pig." He thinks Prof. Baerg may have developed some immunity, so that a venom harmless to him might not be harmless to others.

With a Panamanian tarantula, Sericopelma rubronitens, Phil Rau tried a few years ago to check the progress of the poison in a mouse's body. He had no luck so far as that original object was concerned, for the mouse died all over and all at once the moment the spider sank its fangs.

"After ten minutes, the mouse stealthily explored the floor of the (Concluded on Page 7.)

domestic spiders as well as foreign. Pinkus emphasizes that his Missouri tarantulas were found far from a railroad, and that they are, by nature, anything but migratory. But the St. Louis entomologist does not attempt to minimize the mystery of their survival where the ground is snow-covered for days or weeks every year and frost penetrates the ground to 40 inches, twice the depth of any tarantula burrow he has found. Typical of all, the first tarantula at Pevely was found in a hole under a flat rock, thinly lined with webbing for a depth of two inches. Pinkus ran a long, stiff grass-blade in it to see how deep it was, and then, at an angle, thrust a large knife toward the base of the tunnel. The tarantula popped out, probably a little miffed. As Pinkus reached for it, it reared up on its hind legs and bared a pair of somewhat discouraging fangs, each about a quarter of an inch long. Pinkus scooped it into a mason on a gentle slope. The opening was jar and clapped down the lid. Though he has tentative reservations about their harmlessness, he points out factors which, he considers, leave most of the popular horrors about them without a leg to stand on. For one thing, they are decided stayat-homes. He and Prof. Baerg and Phil Rau, the distinguished Kirkwood ifornia and other Southwestern states, amateur, all agree that this explains

Beauty Through the Ages

As Seen by a Modern Artist

An Analysis of Feminine Loveliness from Nefertiti to the Twentieth Century Girl.

> HROUGH a series of 14 mural panels painted not long ago by Clara Fargo Thomas one gets an opportunity to see the history of the ideals of fe-

Clara Fargo Thomas. as' client was a well-known Fifth avenue cosmetics expert-a "beautician," as it is sometimes sweepingly called. Her murals were exhibited in London during the Royal Jubilee. They have been shown at a St. Louis department store. They should, in other words, be entitled to a certain authority on a question that has vexed students of esthetics ever since that rather fuzzy sister of philosophy was founded. Namely, what constitutes feminine loveliness?

The ideal has been extremely various. Hundreds of types not shown in Mrs. Thomas' murals have been considered the apotheosis of beauty in other ages and localities. Her choices, therefore, are as significant as her treatment of them. Opinions have varied widely since the time of Nefertiti, wife of the Pharaoh Akhenaten. Nefertiti, whose classic profile and slender, cool immaculateness make her this artist's favorite among all the beauties of history, would have seemed anemic and scrawny to artists of the sixteenth century. In other words the Egyptian ideal is more nearly akin to the contemporary one than are any of the others. Possibly the fact that both types are illustrated in athletic postures gives a clew to the reason.

Mrs. Thomas has done a painstaking piece of research in order to reproduce every detail accurately. Her most difficult task must have been the elimination of all the possible choices, not only of types, but also of individual representatives of these types. Her figures are severely stylized and rendered with simplicity. They are painted in tempera, mostly red and black. What would be most interesting to a future archeologist is that all -or nearly all her subjects-were originally portrayed in a firmly established, generally accepted style, while her own age never produced one.

SCIENTIST CALLS FOR FIVE MEALS A DA'

way of satisfying human needs. A daily function like eating three meals a day wears its groove deeper and eeper into the fabric of living. If the groove is crooked or misshapen it may create itching harassment and continual vexation. The last thing that occurs to normal mortals is to doubt the absolute and God-given justification for a settled habit (however pernicious), provided it is shared by the majority of a community (however local, temporary and insular).

Habits build up walls above themselves, like furrows. These walls are common prejudices or catchwords that don't have to be examined because they're so obviously true. Often, in spite of "common sense," they're incontestably false and silly. That doesn't make any difference to the normal man. It is the duty of sciensts, however, to recognize this and point it out. The outstanding scientist is a man equipped to eliminate set down to fatigue. But where you prejudices and habitual grooves of have people who come to work with each human action in his fingers and looks it over as if he had never seen or heard of it before.

That is what Dr. Leon A. Greenberg nd Dr. Howard W. Haggard of Sheffield Scientific School, Yale University, have done in their examination of eating habits. Haggard, senior partner in this investigation, is a past master of this method, and while his examinations may not go very deep, they usually jolt the members of his audience out of their settled faith in custom and common sense—at least for the time being. He has turned his sound medical background to account in his work on applied physiology during recent years and has produced a number of books, including "The Science of Health and Disease." "Devils, Drugs and Doctors" and "The Lame, the Halt and the Blind." He is a specialist on industrial fatigue and efficiency and made news when he used the Yale crew as his guinea pigs for metabolism experiments.

Thus his conclusion that the three meals a day habit is completely unsuitable has to be taken seriously. It isn't a bombshell intended to attract attention to the doctor. It is a fairly mature deduction from evidence that was objectively examined. Among the butted prejudices punctured by this evidence is the notion that hunger is a sensation that can always be recognized, that three meals a day satisfies it, that eating before sleep causes nightmares, that the stomach "needs a rest." Dr. Haggard points out that America is the only large nation which eats only three times a day. In all European countries four or five meals are taken for granted. This, as the present experiments prove, is not only a healthier way to distribute the eating process, but one that causes less fatigue during the day, hence more efficient work. Not that Dr. Haggard advocates eating more food. He doesn't. He is simply discussing the time distribution for meals. Let him speak for himself.

"We have always accepted the conventional three meals a day without any question. These things are so and we assume they should be so. Yet it's W. Haggard of Yale quite certain that this arrangement wasn't made to give us the greatest nutritional benefits. For instance, breakfast is generally a light meal because it's too difficult these days to prepare an elaborate one. Service in America is now at a minimum. "Then in most American homes the evening dinner is eaten fairly early, as otherwise some one would have to work late to wash the dishes. Most people can't eat their principal meal at noon because they work too far away from home. The meal time for all the people in the house, the young and the aged and the babies, is the same. Yet their nutritional needs are very "One meal time is best for the child, another best for the working adult and yet another for the sedentary old person. It's the problem of science to discover the best meal time interval for each and to formulate a principle for practical application. "This is what we set out to do and we found that with a more frequent meal time arrangement the industrial output of workers was increased as much as 10 per cent. What many scientific managers call 'industrial fatigue' is often just plain hunger.

"For instance, the low output during the last hour of the day might be out breakfast and their output in early morning is lower than in the afternoon you can't say that fatigue is the reason for it.

E FOUND that physical efficiency is lowest before breakfast, although at that time one is most rested. If you eat no breakfast; your physical efficiency is at this low level. After you've eaten a meal, this efficiency rises sharply." Experiments were made on 213 individuals with a wide range of age, occupation and meal time habit.

The most important thing these experiments show is that, while physical efficiency rises after meals, it falls again to the low level before breakfast in two and one-half to four hours unless another meal is taken.

This rise and fall of efficiency is independent of any work that's performed. It occurs in the person who is resting as well as in one who is doing vigorous work. It indicates that the lowered efficiency is due to lack of

When one group of workers was changed from three to five meals a day, there was no decrease in their production in the late hours of the morning and afternoon which had been previously charged to fatigue.

"Our conclusions show," Dr. Haggard pointed out, "that the practice of eating food in three installments doesn't give a person the greatest efficiency, vigor and freedom from distraction of which he's capable.

"So far as we've been able to discover, there's no logical reason for the common choice of three meals a day. It's rather a convention that has grown out of the factory movement. With centralized employment and a long, intensive working day, only one interval was given for a meal. Consequently the regimen of America became three meals a day. And this three-meal regimen has become a cul-

"For the working person, as for the active, growing child, the highest efficiency and vigor require food at more frequent intervals."

There is no implication in this that Americans whose eating habits aren't hampered by economic distress are under-nourished. The fact that 40 per cent of the children in public schools suffer severely from malnutrition is doubtless more a result of general poverty than of bad eating habits. The suggestion that eating should take place more frequently doesn't imply that one should eat more heavily. Eating breakfast, second breakfast, lunch, tea, dinner and supper, one may still put away no more food than is habitually taken in three periods.

HERE'S one tendency," Dr. Haggard continues, "that must be guarded against when you go on this five or six meal schedule, and that is to be careful to keep the diet balanced. The meals must be well chosen. Stuffing yourself with a piece of cake and washing it down with a cup of coffee or soda isn't a meal. Yet that's what people do when they eat between regular

"You must get in your regular supply of milk, eggs, meat, fruit and vegetables. These are necessary for every one's diet.

"We found, during the course of our experiments, that a great many workers, both in the factories and offices, live on diets that don't begin to fulfill their needs. They ate what their appetities desired. One woman lived almost entirely on cheese sandwiches, coffee and candy; another had a diet that was at least two-thirds ice cream sodas, and still another ate little but bread, jam and coffee.

"There are extreme cases, of course. But the other workers didn't eat with any better discretion. We also found that many people came to work without breakfast. Yet this is the most important meal of the day.

"Our conception of the five-meal-aday schedule calls for the conventional three meals, with the addition of two smaller meals, one midmorning and the other midafternoon. And the food for these two must be subtracted from the regular meals. The sum total should satisfy the requirements of a fully balanced diet.'

Dr Haggard was asked why we don't realize that hunger is the cause of the fatigue. Why doesn't the stomach rise up and proclaim its needs?

"The stomach only does that when it's absolutely empty," he replied. "In fact, it's very insistent in babies and young children. "But adults acquire habits, and when that occurs half-empty stomachs

there are a great many advantages to be got by eating small meals at short intervals."

Of course, when the average business man meets the suggestion that he should eat more frequently, he will be contemptuous of any notion so contradictory to his well-rutted groove. The notion of having his stenographer take time out for tea-much less the notion of doing so himself-seems outlandish and absurd. But Dr. Haggard has been an efficiency expert not to be disregarded. His experiments on eating habits may, as in the case of other investigations he has carried on, have a distinct value to business men and industrialists.

He points out that lowered production at certain periods in the day has always been assumed to be the result of fatigue. Since work was supposed to create this let-down, rest was naturally assumed to be its cure. Experiments have shown, however, that rest doesn't always do the trick. When fatigue is caused by hunger, it can only be cured by food.

Dr. Haggard pointed out that many other factors very often enter into the problem of fatigue. Environment, health, social conditions, family and other personal-relation difficulties all have a bearing on diminished produc-

HESE factors have been recognized," he said. "But recent years the ten gry.' In the adult the sensation of has been to ignore them and to limit hunger is so conditioned that he es- attention to conditions within the factory and office. And this is a move in the wrong direction. Fatigue in its true sense rarely occurs in industry. The average individual doesn't do enough to get tired. There are exceptions, of course, like ditch diggers.

"So long as the term 'fatigue' is used, attention will be fixed on the job and a rest will be prescribed.

"For this reason, it would be better to discard the terms 'industrial fatigue' and 'causes of fatigability.' It would be better to use a word free from the connotations of 'fatigue,' and one that would direct attention to the really important feature-diminished production. For such a term we'd suggest impairment of productivity. It's the condition-any conditionthat results in limitation of production. "There are many causes for this impairment. A man may have trouble with his wife or his mother-in-law. Ill health or frustration may be a cause. The frequency with which meals are taken may, in a great many cases, influence production from hour to hour. There are no single remedies for fatigue. All the conditions must be investigated."

Dr. Haggard believes that people who are healthy can eat everything. "Eat what you like, but with an eye out to the right amount of roughage. That's very important. Any food that can be eaten separately, in comfort and peace, can be mixed at the same meal. I don't believe that there are foods which can't be mixed.

"Dyspepsia and many other troubles come to the person who is always worrying about his diet. The emotions have a profound effect on your food. A good rule to remember is that when you eat never think hard, never be cross or angry or have any emotional upset. There must be peace when you eat.

"The dinner table is about the worst place to have a quarrel. Angry emotions stop digestion. But if you're enjoying the meal, your feeling of pleasure will increase digestion."

best schedule."

"There are no indications that the stomach needs a rest. Or that it does rest when it's empty," he answered. "On the contrary, when it's empty its contractions become painful. When it has been empty for some time it temporarily loses its ability to cope with an ordinary meal and doesn't behave well. After a long fast it is brought back to normal by small amounts of food at short intervals. A large meal is painful and even dangerous.

"The stomach doesn't need a rest any more than the heart needs a rest. "It's the large meals, not the frequent ones, that put a burden on digestion. The reason for the lassitude and inability to think or work that follow large meals is due to the fact that the blood supply and energy are busy digesting all the food. "You don't have such effects after small meals eaten at frequent intervals. The convalescent, the invalid and the person with a gastric ulcer are fed at short intervals and in small amounts not to 'rest' their weakened

The story of the unhappy heiress was brought to public attention the other day when she filed suit here for $500,000 damages against her mother, Mrs. Maryon Hewitt McCarter; Dr. Tilton E. Tillman and Dr. Samuel G. Boyd, San Francisco doctors, and Mrs. Mary S. Scally, a psychiatrist of the State Department of Public Health. She alleged that the doctors had performed a sterilization operation on her, that her mother ordered it, and that the psychiatrist had helped provide an excuse for it by pronouncing her feeble-minded.

The operation was performed, she said, in August, 1934, nearly a year before she reached her legal majority. She thought at the time, she asserted, that she was merely to have her appendix removed, and did not learn the actual nature of the operation until a short time ago.

Advancement of her mother's financial interests was the purpose of the sterilization, the heiress alleged. Under her father's will, Ann receives two-thirds of the income from a trust fund, her mother one-third. The will provides that a child of Ann's would receive the latter's income upon her death, but that if Ann died childless, her mother, if surviving, would receive her portion. The girl's petition also charges her mother with squandering much of Ann's money in gambling. Another suit in New Jersey seeks an accounting of Mrs. Mc-Carter's handling of her daughter's Prompt denials were entered on behalf of Mrs. McCarter and the two doctors concerned-denials, that is, that there was a financial motive involved. It was admitted that the sterilization operation was performed. A spokesman for Mrs. McCarter said she had it done "to protect Ann and so-The physicians said they had acted under Mrs. McCarter's instructions, after they had examined the girl and come to the conclusion she was feeble-minded. Although Mrs. Scally gave the opinion that Ann was mentally defective it is understood she did. not recommend sterilization.

These findings as to Ann's mentality have been disputed by nurses who have attended her and by an Eastern psychiatrist who examined her. They have indicated that any backwardness in her mental development is due, not to inability to learn but to lack of opportunity resulting from a sequestered

It is a family which has repeatedly been in the public eye that is thus brought again into prominence. Ann's father was Peter Cooper Hewitt, a noted inventor. He is credited with having originated, among other things, the vaporized mercury lamp, the static rectifier, the electrical interrupter and the wireless receiver. His father was Abram S. Hewitt, once Mayor of New York. Ann's greatgrandfather in that line was Peter Cooper, the philanthropist who founded Cooper Union.

Ann's mother has been considerably publicized for her beauty, her spectacular galety and her imposing succession of husbands. A member of an old Virginia family, the daughter of Tunstall T. Andrews, she began her matrimonial career in 1902 by marrying Dr. Pedar Bruguiere, a San Francisco physician who later became a society photographer. A Reno divorce ended that marriage in 1909 after two sons had been born to the couple. The next year she married Stewart Denning, a New York broker. That marriage also was dissolved in Reno, in 1911. For seven years she remained a widow. In 1918 she married Hewitt. He died in 1921 in Paris, and in 1922 his widow married Baron Robin d'Erlanger, an artistically inclined Englishman, who distinguished himself briefly by making for her an anklet of gold and diamonds-for which she furnished the materials. That union was dissolved in court also.

Mrs. McCarter's last marriage took place in 1926, but didn't become public until the next year. The new husband was George W. McCarter, a New Jersey lawyer. They were recently divorced; McCarter said his wife refused to live in New Jersey.

ETWEEN her fourth and fifth marriages the Baroness—as she was then-had the entertaining experience of being courted by the Shah of Persia. It was reported that he proposed to her 17 times. She declined to join his harem even to obtain a personal intimacy with his famous 100-carat diamond, the Sea of the age of 21 and became legally free of her mother's guardianship. Within two weeks she and her mother separated, and before a month was over, she had filed suit in New Jersey for an accounting of Mrs. Mc-Carter's disposition of the daughter's income. The suit was brought in New Jersey because it was there that the guardianship was arranged. It was as a result of some inquiries made in connection with the accounting suit, according to Ann, that she discovered that the operation to which she had submitted in August, 1934—less than a year before she was free to marrywas for the purpose of sterilization. Her damage suit followed. It charged that, in addition to tricking her into being sterilized, Mrs. McCarter had squandered large amounts of her daughter's money and had treated her very badly.

The termination of her fourth marriage was preceded by an exchange of advertisements. Her husband advertised in Paris papers to this effect:

Among the accusations, denials and affidavits that followed filing of the suit, was Ann's own story of her childhood. The heiress, wearing inexpensive clothes, told of being "kept locked up" when a small child and of being called an imbecile by her moth-

"My mother never liked me," she said. "As long as I can remember she never showed me any affection. She cared more for spending money-on herself. dren when I'm old. That's my story." Mrs. McCarter countered with an affidavit in which whe said Ann seemed to be unduly susceptible to men in uniform and that she had written letters to a chauffeur. "The chauffeur told me he had such letters," she continued. "It was necessary to secure possession of those letters. I did so. The letters were of a character which justified their immediate destruction. They contained locks of Ann's hair and a great many references to things which should not be written about. I paid thousands of dollars in currency to secure these letters to break up the infatuation.

"From time to time since that date, I have had to use special means for blocking what seemed to be infatuations on the part of Ann. Mostly these occurred with men in uniform, regardless of their station."

HROUGH her attorney, Russell L. Tyler, Ann came back with the assertion it was her mother; not she, who felt that way about men in uniform. She denied she ever had a romance.

Among the affidavits was one by Miss Grace Wilkins, a nurse who had attended Ann. She said Mrs. McCarter got $9000 from the Hewitt estate to pay for the operation. She asserted: "I observed three months of abuse of her (Ann) by her mother. She was kept in pajamas upstairs.

. The girl was afraid to eat. told me she had been threatened with poison. . . Her letters were censored. So were her telephone calls."

On the other hand, Dr. I. L. Hill of New York, who was in attendance when Ann was born, said that the birth was premature, and the fact the baby lived was proof of Mrs. McCarter's care of her. And Dr. Tillman declared that "Ann had lots of stylish clothes."

As to Ann's scant schooling, Mrs. McCarter said her daughter had been expelled from various schools, once because of an incident "too scandalous to mention." Ann's version: "I was really forced to leave school because the fast conduct of my mother was Statements regarding Ann's mentality have been sharply conflicting. Her mother, Dr. Tillman and Dr. Boyd and Mrs. Scally, the psychiatrist, have said the girl was feeble-minded. But three nurses who have attended her say she is not. And Dr. Lawrence Collins of the New Jersey State Hospital for the Insane, who examined her last November, stated she did not "present any intellectual defects or mental aberations." She was, he said, "correctly oriented in all spheres" and showed "no obvious impairment in her thinking capacity. . . Her schooling and general knowledge were in keeping with her early advantages." He found that she spoke French and Italian and had read some of the standard authors. "Any intellectual difficulty that might be present," he said, "is due not to any pathological defects, but to a lack of development of her intellectual faculties. It is my belief that this young girl had been conditioned during her early formative years by unwholesome environment.'

While awaiting trial of the damage suit, Ann, who is living here with friends-her mother is in the East-is busy planning what she will do with her independence. She wants an apartment of her own, an automobile, lots of friends, nice clothes and a good time. She thinks she would like to go to art school and take singing lessons. She hopes to marry some day.

In reply the wife advertised as foltwo dates.

"I. Maryon Cooper Hewitt d'Erlanger, referring to the advertisements in this column on February 14 and 23, declare them to be misleading, as Baron R. E. F. R. d'Erlanger has never at any time contributed to my support or his own."

Athletics have fascinated Anthony Biddle ever since his youth; not only is he an expert wrestler, fencer and tennis player, but he has had the distinction of boxing with most of the heavyweight champions of this century in exhibition bouts. What makes Lieutenant-Colonel Biddle even more remarkable, however, is his non-athletic activities, which have been equally diversified: for he has been an author of travel, fiction and children's books, a poet, a publisher, an explorer, a musician, a lecturer and the organizer of Bible classes which he himself taught. to mention only a few of his outstanding accomplishments.

It was some years ago that Edward Biddle, father of Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, went to work for the millionaire banking firm of A. J. Drexel & Company in Philadelphia, today headed by E. T. Stotesbury. While Edward Biddle was associated with the Drexel business, he became acquainted with Emilie Drexel, the daughter of Anthony Joseph Drexel. Edward Biddle married Emilie Drexel, became a member of the Drexel firm, and thus united the Drexel and Biddle fortunes.

UT Edward Biddle did not stay married to Emilie Drexel for long, nor did he remain in the Drexel banking firm for more than a few years. After his divorce from Emilie Drexel, Edward Biddle remarried and since that time he has remained the official head of the large Biddle clan, which in 1932 on the the first Biddle on American shores, held a reunion in the Pennsylvania Historical Society, which was attended Edward Biddle and Emilie Drexel had three sons: Anthony Joseph Drexel Biddle, Livingston L. Biddle and Edward Craig Biddle. Anthony chose to remain with his father while his two younger brothers grew up with the Drexel side of the family. When Anthony Joseph Drexel died, he left each of these three grandsons a sizable fortune—to Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, his namesake and by far the most colorful of the three, he bequeathed $1.000,000.

Even when Anthony Biddle was a young man, he seemed to know what he wanted and insisted on doing it. His father sent him to private schools in Philadelphia and then he went abroad to study at Heidelberg. There he became extremely proficient in athletics and showed himself an expert in handling the sword and the rapier in fencing bouts.

When Anthony returned to the United States, he wanted to write. He got himself a job as a sports reporter on the Public Ledger and jokingly spoke of himself as "the poorest and richest reporter in Philadelphia." After two years of newspaper work, he decided to go to the Madeira Islands to observe conditions there. On his return from this expedition, he wrote a book about the islands, lectured about what he had seen, and was made ing to overcome the tedium of exile a fellow of the Royal Geographical Society for his findings.

In spite of his many interests, Anthony Biddle found time to fall in love; he met and married Cordelia dom. Rundell Bradley, the daughter of a prominent Pennsylvania financier. In 1896 Anthony Biddle turned to the publishing business; he revived the defunct Philadelphia Sunday Graphic for a short time, founded The People, a short-lived society weekly, rumors spread from the little Eastern and started the Drexel Biddle publishing house, which was in existence only a couple of years. Biddle kept on traveling extensively and he found "It is the effeminate, milk-and-water religion of our responsible for the fact that so few boys and men attend services," Biddle said. "Jesus was an athlete. He was not the anemic, neurasthenic. pale and sickly fig. ure which the painters portray, or he never would have been able to accomplish what he did. What we need is a red-blooded, type of athletic religion."

In the fashionable Holy Trinity Church on Philahouse Square, to which Anthony Biddle and his belonged, family Biddle started his first Sunday school class in what he called athletic Christianity in 1907.

He gave the three pupils who came to his first class instruction in the Bible and he then took sium for a workout. Soon enough he had 70 pupils, young and old, from a variety of walks of life, in his class, classes; in 1910 it was said that there were 300,000 members, men, women and children, in such classes throughout the United States and abroad.

The classes were all built on Biddle's idea of developing what he called super-Yankees. strong, healthy boys and men who would learn that religion and manliness were complementary attributes. Many times Biddle's views came into direct conflict with members of the clergy who upbraided his "pugilistic Bible classes" from their pulpits and warned their followers against them.

But Biddle went on undaunted, mixing gymnastics with the Bible and watching his popularity increase. One of the stunts for which he became famous earned him the title of "The Gentleman with the Iron Jaw"; it consisted of driving a piece of broom handle two feet long into the earth, leaving it with only one inch sticking out. gripping it with his teeth and pulling it

Not only did Biddle instruct his Sunday school class in the art of boxing and gymnastics, but finance these classes he built a miniature prize-fight ring in the rear of the Biddle family home on Walnut street. There he and his pugilistic friends gave exhibition bouts to audiences composed of silk-hatted society men, who gladly put generous contributions into the collection box.

Biddle decorated the ring with trophies of prizefights, pictures and other fistic knickknacks. He organized what his ring and use it for practice. Among those who accepted the invitation were Bob Fitzsimmons, Jim Corbett, Philadelphia Jack O'Brien and "Packy" Mc-Farland. Biddle not only engaged in exhibition bouts with champions in the ring in his own home, but even entered them publicly, in spite of the protests of some of the members of his own social set. Once when he and Philadelphia Jack O'Brien engaged in a six-round bout at the Merion Cricket Club, the police had to be called to keep the crowds in order. And when, in 1920, Biddle stood up to the visiting Georges Carpentier in the Hotel headlines of every paper in the land. When the war broke out, Biddle opened a military training camp at Lansdowne, near Philadelphia, where he trained 4000 young Philadelphians in military maneuvers. In 1917 he himself joined up with the United States Marines as a Captain, was soon made a Major, and was the first man who gave Gene Tunney boxing lessons at Quantico. When Tunney became heavyweight champion he said that Major Biddle had been an excellent tutor and that it was Major Biddle who had been the first to arouse in him the "killer instinct" so necessary in a good prizefighter.

Recently Lieutenant-Colonel Biddle said that he considered Gene Tunney the best heavyweight of the century. "Fitzsimmons had a wonderful shift." Biddle explained, 'Corbett was lightning fast. Ruhlin was game and strong. Jeffries had tremendous hitting power, and Johnson displayed a phenomenal defense, but I consider Tunney best of all."

AJOR BIDDLE trained marines in saber, dagger, machete, bayonet and bombing practice; he went overseas, fought at the front, and when the war was over returned to America and became a member of the Marine Corps Reserve. In 1919 Major Biddle opened a camp near Pitman, New Jersey, and there for 10 days out of the summer he directed 120 junior boy Marines, 30 girl Marines and 20 Philadelphia Military Training Corps members in drills. Every summer since then Major Biddle has been directing the same camp.

In 1934 Major Biddle was made a Lieutenant-Colonel; he was credited with having originated the bayonet and boxing system used by the Marine Basic School at the Philadelphia Navy Yard. He is now stationed at the Navy Yard in Philadelphia, where he instructs a class of 100 junior officers in bayonet and dagger work, fencing, wrestling and boxing. Recently these pupils gave their Lieutenant-Colonel a two-foot silver cup as a token of

And now, in addition to his class at the Navy Yard, Colonel Biddle has taken on a class in jiu-jitsu for Gmen in the Quaker City.

But even all these activities do not embrace everything which the Biddle scion has wanted to do and done so far in his life. He has engaged in unique contests like the one in which he used an army bayonet against the Cossack whip of Colonel Alexander Khaussa; he has played exhibition tennis in Palm Beach, been a long-distance walker, written "All-Round Athletics," "Froggy Fairy Book," "Land of the Wine" and "The Life of Fitzsimmons," and taken part in swimming matches; he once studied singing for five months in Paris and planned a concert tour which never came off. Among his offices have been president of the Philadelphia Fencers' Club. president of the Baby Welfare Association in Philadelphia, head of the Army and Navy and Civilian Board of Boxing Control, which began a nationwide movement to place boxing on a solid basis in the early twenties, and president of the International Sporting Club, with headquarters in New

Colonel Biddle believed that athletics began at home, not only so far as he himself was concerned, but also in regard to his son Tony. When the boy was young, Colonel Biddle trained him in the fine art of boxing and later Tony Biddle became the sponsor of the Belgian middleweight, Rene de Vos. who, he hoped, would be a champion. Tony Biddle guessed wrong on De Vos, who was a flop in the ring, and since then young Biddle's interest as a promoter has stopped. Now that Tony Biddle has become a Minister, it is probable that he will leave the field of jiu-jitsu and boxing entirely to his

The diversion-loving whilom sovereign is now 55, and thinks he has many years to live. He may be hopeful that he will be permitted to live them in Paris, but thus far his latest plea for the termination of his exile has brought scant encouragement.

Sunday Magazine-St. Louis Post-Dispatch- February 2, 1936.

The Post-Dispatch begins herewith the publication of a series of murder tales by Edmund Pearson, well-known collector and narrator of crime stories, both past and current. His latest collection, "More Studies in Murder," came out in New York this week. The following true account is among the most masterly in that series. It is Mr. Pearson's contention that only two or three murder cases in all parts of the world merit the serious attention of detective story fans. This collection represents his gleanings over a long period and will

HERE was a murder case in England which not only needed a Sherlock Holmes but seemed as if it had been devised in solemn conclave by Conan Doyle, Holmes and Watson themselves. It could be entitled The Mystery of the Green Bicycle; or. The Curious Incident of the Dead appeal equally to the novice crime reader and the hardened connoisseur.

Unfortunately, there was no great hawk-faced detective from Baker street in it. Only, at the beginning, a local constable named Hall. Perhaps that is why one of the men best informed on this case says that it has "considerable claims to be regarded as the most fascinating murder mystery of the century."

Bella Wright was 21 and lived with her father and mother in a tiny place called Stoughton. This is within a mile or two of the city of Leicester. and in that city she was employed in a rubber factory.

She was a girl with good looks and good character and was engaged to be married to a stoker in the navy.

The country round about Leicester is full of little villages connected by old Roman roads or by lanes with high hedges. To the north is the famous hunting center of Melton Mow-

The lanes are charmingly picturesque and lonely, but were made for a less motorized age. They are sometimes full of surprises and excitement for the pedestrian or the cyclist. At a curve he may suddenly be confronted by a flock of sheep, just as an enormous motor bus, brushing the hedge on either side, comes up behind him.

Miss Wright was accustomed to go to and from her work on a bicycle, and sometimes, in the long daylight hours of the English summer evenings, to cycle from one hamlet to another to do errands or to call on her friends. Her uncle, a man named Measures, lived in the village of Gaulby, three miles from her home.

She was on the late shift at the factory, and one Friday evening in July rode home from her work at 11 o'clock, going to bed soon after. Next. day seems to have been a holiday, so she thoroughly made up her sleep, not getting up again till 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon. Then, after writing a few letters, she rode with them to the postoffice at Evington. Again she came home, but finally, at 6:30 p. m., set out on her cycle in the opposite direction, away from Leicester. Her mother had seen her start for Evington, and never after that saw her

At 9:20 that evening (still daylight) a farmer named Cowell was driving cattle along the old Roman road called the Gartree road or Via Devana. At a point about two miles from Gaulby, where the way is very lonely and the hedges, at that season, more than eight feet high, Cowell found Bella Wright lying dead in the road. Her head was covered with blood, and her cycle lay askew, with its front wheel pointing toward Stoughton-that is, toward home.

The farmer supposed that she had been killed by a fall or similar mischance. He placed her on the grass at the side of the road. Her body was still warm. Close to the spot where it was found-and this may be important-there was an opening in the hedge: a field gate which led into the grassy meadow beyond.

Constable Hall and a doctor came later, after it was dark. The doctor's hasty examination led to nothing more than a general impression that Miss Wright had been thrown from her bicycle, had fractured her skull on a stone. Cowell's statement as to his discovery of the body seems to have been accepted as quite satisfactory. This was due, I suppose, to his good reputation, since the only witnesses he could call to prove his story were Miss Wright's body rested that night in a cottage nearby. Early next morning Constable Hall decided to make further investigation. He carefully examined the road; and 17 feet from the bloodstain which marked the spot where the girl's head had lain in the dust he found a bullet, caliber .45, partly embedded in the road as if it had been stepped on or run over.

He made another exceedingly curious discovery: the gate which led into The First in a Series of Studies in Crime

"In the field the constable came across a large bird with black plumage—dead. This bird was found to be gorged with blood."

the field was painted white, and on the top bar were marks of clawsmarks in blood. There were tracks of these claws, also in blood-12 such sets of tracks, six going and six returning-leading from the body to the gate. In the field the constable came across a large bird with black plumage-dead. This bird was found to be gorged with blood. Indeed, that surfeit of blood was supposed to have

In England everybody is keen about birds and their habits. As soon as the Leicestershire police said that this bird was a raven, other folk flew to the defense of ravens. They said (a) there were no ravens around Leicestershire; and (b) if there were, they had never been known to drink blood.

(The bird of which the Book of Job says "Her young ones also suck up blood" is not the raven but the eagle.)

This creature, said the bird experts, must be a rook or a carrion crow.

HATEVER bird it was, there are two schools of thought about it, and all the authorities, Messrs. H. R. Wakefield, Edward Marjoribanks and others, have discussed it. There are the severely practical ones, who think that the raven (or rook) had no connection with the death of Bella Wright; and there are the romantics, who believe there was a very close connection.

At all events, how did the bird obtain so much blood from the poor dead or dying girl as to cause it own death? Was that really the cause of its death? How did it chance to be in that vicinity at the moment? Since the body is supposed to have been found within a few minutes of death, how was there time for all this gruesome feasting and tracking back and forth from road to gate?

Let's return now to Constable Hall and the bullet. He and the doctor made another examination of the body. After the blood had been washed from the girl's face they found a small bullet wound one inch below the left eye, and another slightly larger, the mark of the exit of the bullet, in her hair. Thus it seemed that this heavy bullet had passed through the girl's head, yet had gone no farther than 17 feet from her!

At all events, this was murder, and it was the duty of the police to inquire where she had been, and with whom, between 6:30 and 9:20 of that summer evening-daylight all the

At 7:30 she had ridden up to the cottage of her uncle, Mr. Measures, in Gaulby. Calling on Measures at the time was his son-in-law, a man named Evans. So both of them were important witnesses to her arrival and departure. With her, when she came, was another cyclist, a young man. Bella Wright went in leaving the young man outside. She remarked that he was "a perfect stranger," and

"Perhaps if I wait a while he will be gone.' Yet she did not ask her uncle to drive him away, as if he were objectionable. And when, an hour or more later, they came out again, the young man was still there-having either returned or waited. This time, he greeted her, so said Measures and Evans, with the remark:

"Bella, you have been a long time. I thought you had gone the other

Evans had some friendly conversation with the stranger about his bicycle. And finally, the girl and the young man pedaled away togetherat, say, 8:40. Forty minutes later, or thereabouts, Cowell, the farmer, was finding Bella's dead body in the Gar-

Now, as the reader has noticed, there are some contradictions in this. If the man was "a perfect stranger." how had he progressed so far as to call her Bella? This has been answered by the statement that what he really said was "Hello!" And that certainly goes more reasonably with the rest of his remark.

How is this for an explanation of. the incident? That he was a stranger, as she said, who had joined her as she rode along; and that, while his company was perfectly tolerable to her, she had offered a little tribute to strict propriety when she said to her uncle that if she waited around a bit he would go away. Girls do not, today-if they ever did-scream and say, "Sir, I have never met you!" when a presentable stranger starts conversation, while riding along a country road. They may welcome it or they may simply bear it, not wishing to make a fuss, and knowing that, in most cases, the man will soon go away without becoming an annoyance. Measures and Evans had had a good look at this man and his cycle, and so in a few days the police were offering a reward for a man of 35, about 5 feet. 7 to 9 inches in height, hair turning gray, and with rather a high-pitched voice. They gave a description of his clothes and various other particulars.

The notable thing was that he rode a green bicycle.

ND for the next few months each man in Leicestershire unfortunate enough to own a green bicycle wished to heaven that he had never bought it. After he had satisfied the police as to where he had been on that July evening, he had to encounter the jeering remarks of his friends as to his diversions and his murderous disposition.

But the man really sought—the last man alive with Miss Wright-was not so easily discovered. Scotland Yard had a try at it, but could do nothing with the murder, the missing green bicycle or the dead raven.

Half a year went by, and Bella Wright had long been lying in the churchyard past which she rode that evening. Then, one day in February, something happened: a most peculiar chance, which, for a time, probably revived faith in the ancient falsehood, "Murder will out."

A canal boat was passing through Leicester, carrying a load of coal to the rubber works where the dead girl had been employed. A boatman named Whitehouse was idly watching his tow rope when he saw it slacken down into the water and then tighten. As it became taut it brought up part of a bicycle, which hung in plain sight for a moment-long enough to change the whole current of a man's lifethen slipped back into the water. Whitehouse had not forgotten all those police advertisements and the reward: he came back next day and dragged the canal. He hauled up the bicycle frame again, and, as he hoped, it was

The police were soon busy-dragging the canal for other interesting objects and examining the one the boatman had found. From the canal they fished other parts of the machine: also a revolver holster with 12

ball and seven blank cartridges in it. The green bicycle was of a special model, made in Birmingham, and from it the name and number plate and other identifying marks had carefully been removed. But, in an obscure place, was found the number 103.648 -and this was the number of a bicycle sold years before to a Mr. Ronald Vivi-

This gentleman was found teaching mathematics at a school in Cheltenham. He was a good-looking, rather earnest man; a little prematurely old in appearance, possibly as a result of his experiences in the war. He was a Rugby School boy, a civil engineer who had served four years in France, part of the time with an officer's commission. Shell-shocked and slightly deaf since the great German attack in 1918, he had been discharged in 1919. For about a year thereafter (the year 1919, in the summer of which Miss Wright was killed) he had been out of work and living in Leicester with his mother. His present position dated only from January, 1920, the month before the discovery of the green bi-

Invited by a police inspector to explain how the fragments of his bicycle happened to be at the bottom of the canal, Mr. Light proceeded to tell a pack of lies. He said he had never owned a green bicycle; he had never seen Bella Wright; he had never been in the village of Gaulby-certainly not on that crucial evening last July.

Naturally, there was nothing to do but arrest him-especially as Bella's uncle, Mr. Measures, and Evans also, positively identified him as the mysterious man who rode away with her so shortly before the murder. And two little girls, Muriel Nunney, aged 14, and Valeria Caven, 12, believed they recognized him as a man who had followed and frightened them, about 5:30 on the day of the murder, and in the same vicinity. They remembered this many months after the event. Some of the cartridges, by the way, found in the holster suspiciously near the sunken bicycle, had bullets like the one found in the road. But, of course, Mr. Light denied the holster as firmly as he did all the other relics.

Now, here was a beautiful case of circumstantial evidence. The net was drawn tight around the poor young man, who would, of course, be convicted-as in the detective nevels.

About three months after his arrest, Ronald Light was placed on trial. The Attorney-General stated the case against the prisoner in all its deadly detail. He began to prove by his witnesses that the bicycle belonged to Light; that he was with the girl shortly before her death; that he had concealed evidence, and lied about it, over and over again.

N THE middle of this testimony the prisoner's counsel quietly interrupted. This was Sir Edward Mar. shall Hall—the famous defender of accused persons, for whom everybody sent, in time of great trouble. Sir Edward courteously intimated that the learned Attorney-General was going to unnecessary pains. He need not prove that the bicycle belonged to the prisoner; they admitted it. He need not prove that his client rode up to Mr. Measures' house that evening, with Bella Wright; they admitted that. Most of the Crown witnesses would not be cross-examined by the defense; only one or two points did

The Attorney-General and the police were probably somewhat disgusted. Here was the defense conceding three. quarters of the case at the outset. What about the other quarter?

Sir Edward denied, and his client would deny, that his client had used the name "Bella." He said "Hello." And Sir Edward took in hand, very kindly and gently, the two little girls, who said they had met Ronald Light near the scene of the murder, and who described him going about the lanes seeking to molest unprotected damsels.

When he got through with Miss Muriel and Miss Valeria, they no longer looked like two little angels of justice, but rather more like two busy little brats who, feeding for months on sensational newspapers and pictures, had suddenly begun to remember something which might have happened to them on some day or other -but which they obligingly fixed for a certain day, after the police had suggested the date.

At the end of the trial the Judge advised the jury not to trouble themselves at all with the testimony of Miss Muriel and Miss Valeria.

When he began to present his case, Sir Edward played his ace. He called the prisoner to the witness stand. Ronald Light was serious, calm and dignified. He was what we call "a shellshocked veteran." who had, moreover, become partially deaf as the result of an exploding shell. There was no attempt to emphasize Light's war-time services, except in so far as his shattered nerves might explain some of his IGHT now testified that he had never had a revolver or pistol since he had been sent home from France on a stretcher. On the evening of the murder he left home at about 5:45 for a bicycle ride, expecting to return at 8 o'clock. He rode through Gaulby, a district he did not know very well, and at 6:45 he was near a place called Little Stretton. He did not see two small girls anywhere. As it was still early, he turned about to go home by the long route, and this led him again toward Gaulby.

He met a girl, who was a stranger to him, standing at the roadside examining her bicycle. She asked if he had a wrench. He had not, but he looked at the front wheel, which seemed merely to wabble a little. There was nothing he could do for it. They rode on together, chatting as they went. She said that she was going to see some friends in Gaulby, and added:

"I shall only be 10 minutes or a quarter of an hour."

Light then testified: "I took that as a sort of suggestion that I should wait and we should ride back together. I waited for 10 minutes or more, then walked my machine up the hill to the church. Here I got on the bicycle to ride back to Leicester, when I found the rear tire flat. I pumped it up, and sat down on a gate; but the tire went down again and I had to mend the puncture. By this time it was 8:15, and I knew I was late anyhow. I hought I would ride back and see if this girl had come
